SECTION IV.

THE CITY OF MADRAS.

THE Englishman on board the steamer, passing along the coast of India when he comes into lat. $13^{\circ} 9' 0''$ N., long. $80^{\circ} 16' 0''$ E., will find himself before the historic city of Madras. The area included within the municipal boundary limits is some twenty-seven square miles; the extreme length of the city from north to south is about nine miles, the greatest breadth at any one point about four miles. The city presents in the foreground a magnificent line of noble edifices on a level sandy shore made pleasing to the eye by green clumps of trees at intervals. The placid blue sea breaks in surf along the line, and the whole scene is dominated by the flag which floats in the tropical air from the flagstaff of Fort St. George. In the distant background are seen some low hills, the buildings on which may be visible even to the naked eye on a clear day. The general pleasing aspect of the city from the sea has been the same during the three centuries, nearly since the old Fort of Cogan and Day was built. "It is, without exception, the prettiest place I ever saw," wrote Mrs. Kindersley, a young and adventurous lady, who travelled alone to India to meet her husband in 1765.

The early history of Madras, and the founding of Fort St. George possess much interest. In South India, the first factory established by the English was the one at Masulipatam, the seaport of the Golconda Kingdom, but the first fortified settlement of the English was at Armagon. Francis Day, the Chief of Armagon, finding the place unsuited for trade, went southwards in search of a new settlement. He received overtures from Damarla Venkatadri, the Naick of Poonamallee, to establish an English settlement at Madras; and it is also stated that the Naick desired that the town should be named after his father, Chinappa Naick. When the Agent at Masulipatam fell in with Day's proposal to form a new settlement, Day selected a site in Madraspatam and obtained from the Naick in 1639 a grant of the site and a cove to build a fort on it. This grant was confirmed by Sri Rang. Rayulu of Chandragiri, the representative of the waning power of Vijayanagar. Francis Day and his chief, Andrew Cogan, without even waiting for the Company's sanction, dismantled the fort at Armagon and erected a fort on the site and called it Fort St. George. Of this fort nothing now remained but the name and the site.

When Francis Day came to this place on his mission to find a site for a new settlement, he found the territory around it cut in three big pieces by the two rivers, the Cooum and the Cochrane Canal, which then were called the Triplicane River and the North or Elambore River. The Triplicane River ran through the villages of Chetput, Nungumbakam and Triplicane. The North River flowed parallel to and about a mile distant from the coast. At the site of the present General Hospital, it turned to the East, and, when near the sea, turned southwards again for about three-quarters of a mile and met the Triplicane River at its outlet. At the first bend near the General Hospital it was connected with the Triplicane River by a canal, on the North bank of which is the present Penitentiary. There was besides a small stream whose course was along Popham's Broadway, across the present Esplanade to near the second bend of the North River. Day selected the strip of land between the sea and the North River, with the Cooum on the south and the village of Madraspatam very close to it on the north. On this strip there existed it is believed, a village known as Chinaiakupam. Even before Day's settlement there existed two villages called Chinaiakupam (or Chennapitam) and Madraspatam (or Madras). Chinaiakupam must have been a small hamlet of fishermen mostly. On the site of this hamlet Cogan and Day's Fort St. George was built, the name Chennapitam (the urban form of Chinaiakupam) being given to the native town which grew around it in deference to the wishes of the local Naick. The name Madraspatam persisted in use. As the village which went by that name continued to exist, the native population showed a preference to the name Chennapitam, while the English preferred the name Madraspatam (or Madras), for the combined towns of Chennapitam and Madraspatam.

Cogan and Day's fort was nearly square with a bastion at each angle and measured on the outside 108 yards from north to south and 100 yards from east to west. The construction was begun on March 1, 1644, and completed in 1653. A promise of exemption from taxes for 30 years attracted nearly 400 weaver families from the neighbourhood and many Portuguese from San Thome—an earlier European settlement—some three miles from Fort St. George. The garrison consisted of 53 Europeans and 35 natives.

In 1653 the Agent, Aaron Baker, began to build outworks, which were brought nearly to a state of completion in 1666. This became the outer fort, the basis of the modern Fort St. George. For a long time the inner fort was called Fort St. George, the area within the walls of the outer fort, where the European population owned houses and lived, being called the Christian or White Town. Just to the north of it and separated from its northern wall by a wide street, called the Bazaar or Market, lay the Black Town where the Indian population lived. Like the Christian Town it was quadrangular and was bounded on the north by the present eastern portion of the China Bazaar, on the south by the inner north wall of the modern Fort St. George, on the east by the sea and on the west by a line parallel to the shore extending from the south end of Popham's Broadway to a point near the gally post on the north-west glacis where it struck the course of the North River. The perimeter of this old Black Town was 3,000 yards. There were seven main streets running north to south and two main streets running east to west. The Hindus had a temple and the Moors a mosque. To the west of the town flowed the stream from Popham's Broadway, which has now degenerated into a drainage channel. On the other side of the channel were some fields and gardens and beyond them lay Peddasankenpetta. The channel was crossed by a small bridge. To the north of the old George Town was Muthialpet. Being the "out town" of the Company's Fort the Black Town was inhabited by the Company's Indian servants, whose protection as well as the better defence of the Fort required the erection of a rampart around the Black Town. An earthen rampart was begun by Agent Ivis about 1644. Governor Yale, against the wishes of his Council, erected a turf bulwark, which fell down during the rains and the cost of which he had to pay. Permanent fortifications, in brick and chunam, were however begun in 1700 and finished in 1707. The total length of this wall was 1,500 yards, and it was 17 ft. thick. During the French occupation of Madras (1746-49), the southern half of this town and all its walls were demolished for the better defence of the Fort. In 1757 the Hindu temple was transferred from the old Black Town to its present site near the Flower Bazaar. The remaining half of the old town was demolished in 1758 on the recommendation of Engineer Call. Thus the old Black Town with its "Chitti" population, "Moors" and Company's merchants disappeared into the crowded streets of Peddasankenpetta and Muthialpet and gave its name to this united town.

The erection of a masonry wall around the new George Town formed always a part of any scheme for the complete defence of the City of Madras. Benjamin Robins was sent here in 1751 with a special commission to execute this work, but it was not till 1764, when Engineer Call pointed out its urgency, that it was begun, and it was finished in 1770. Till about the middle of the last century it was deemed of sufficient consequence for Government to maintain it. In the name of the street lying within the line of the west wall, which bears the name "Wall Tax Road," we have a memorial of this piece of fortification. Under the Preservation of Ancient Monuments Act, the Government have also put up a memorial tablet on the remains of this wall near Royapuram.

The military character of the Company's Government became well established in the first half of the eighteenth century. Cogan and Day's Fort (the old Fort St. George, the "Fort within Fort" as it was called by the country people), falling into decay, was demolished, and on the site a square, called the Fort Square, was built in the years 1711-17, which was demolished only in 1825. The improvement of the defences and fortifications of Madras was taken in hand by Engineer John Brohier in 1756 and completed by Chief Engineer Patrick Ross in 1786—quite a generation. Fort St. George is connected with a long roll of distinguished Engineers—Benjamin Robins, John Brohier, Caroline Frederick Scott, John Call, Patrick Ross, George Munle, etc. By the close of the eighteenth century Fort St. George had passed through four phases of development. The first was Cogan and Day's castle; the second the quadrangular bastioned enclosure of the White Town which converted the original castle into a citadel, the third the development of the walled town into a fortress planned as a half decagon, and the fourth the entire reconstruction of the fort as a half octagon on Vauban's system with ample outwork.

The buildings of historical interest in the present Fort St. George are St. Mary's Church, the Secretariat Office and the Council Room, the Office of the Accountant-General and the Government Treasury, and the Officers' Mess. The oldest structure in the Fort is St. Mary's Church. The foundation of the Church (the English Church as it was then called) was laid on Easter Monday, the 1st of April 1678. The consecration took place in October 1680. The credit of establishing a Church in the Fort for the Company's officers and the oldest Protestant place of worship in India is due entirely to Sir Streygham Master who raised subscriptions for it. Clive's marriage took place here. Its steeple was built in the last decade of the 17th century. During the siege of Madras (1758-59) it was damaged, and re-built in 1795. Among the articles of interest there are the old registers, an alms-dish presented by Elihu Yale, and Streygham Master's Bible printed in 1660, which was presented by Mr. C. G. Master of the Civil Service. The sanctuary contains a large altar piece, a copy of Raphael's Painting of the Last Supper. It contains the graves of Governor Nicholas Morse, a great-grandson of Oliver Cromwell; of Lord Pigot who defended the Fort against Lally in 1759, and was afterwards arrested and imprisoned by his own Council; of the famous Missionary-diplomat Swartz; of Sir Thomas Munro, the people's Collector of the Ceded Districts and afterwards Governor of Madras, and of many other makers of Madras history. Lord Pigot's was the first intramural burial in this Church.

The new Council Room was built quite recently. The Secretariat buildings contain the old Council Room. The middle portion of the Secretariat building has an interesting history. In the Fort of Cogan and Day there was in the centre a turretted structure known as the Fort House. It was built in 1643 and used as the Agent's residence and consultation or council room. Being very defective and unfit for use it was demolished, and a new one built in 1694-95. Its sides were parallel to the curtain of the inner fort but somewhat nearer to the eastern face of it. Lockpear, who was in Madras in 1702 says: "The Consultation Room was curiously adorned with firearms in several figures imitating those in the armoury of the Tower of London,"—a strange but significant contrast to the present Council Room. It was a three-storied building. The Consultation Room and the Governor's quarters were on the second floor, the Fort Hall which accommodated the "General Table" was on the first floor and the ground floor was used for offices. This Fort House, it is believed, exists still as the middle portion of the Secretariat building, the wings of which were added only in 1825. The present Accountant-General's Office was the Admiralty House of old days. It served as the Town Residence of the Governor. The Court of Admiralty was held in it. State functions were held there. Clive occupied this house at the time of his marriage. It was for some time appropriated as the Guests' House of the Governor. The history of the Officers' Mess is as follows:—The Sea Gate and the Colonnade of the old Banqueting Hall in the Fort were for long the general resort of merchants trafficking in sea-borne goods. It was an inconvenient place. Therefore Peter Massey Cassin, a free merchant of Madras, came forward in 1787 with a scheme for providing the town with a special building to serve as an exchange. The land occupied by Mr. Hughes' house which lay at the south end of the easternmost line of buildings north of the Sea Gate was acquired and the old house was replaced by a new structure. It had warehouses and offices on the ground floor, and on the first floor the exchange or "place of public and free, open, and uncontrolled resort for all merchants, dealers, commanders of ships or others having any concern in trade" together with a Brokers' Office, a committee room for the Managers of the Exchange Company and a Public Coffee room. The funds for its construction were raised by lotteries. Mrs. Fay, who visited Madras in 1796, described it as "a noble building, ornamented with whole-length pictures of Lord Cornwallis, Sir Eyre Coote and General Meadows." The Exchange Hall was also used for public meetings, lottery drawings and occasionally for entertainments. Public Auction Rooms were located in it. There was also a Public Subscription Library on the ground floor. The old Madras Bank was located on the ground floor in 1807. The Exchange Tavern occupied for some time a portion of the building. In 1801 St Andrew's Day was celebrated in the Exchange. The valuable crown jewels of Tipu Sultan were sold by public auction at the Exchange in 1802. On the roof of the Exchange a light-house was erected by the Exchange Committee in 1790. It was a framed iron structure, carrying a lantern reflector and twelve lamps burning coconut oil. The light was 90 feet above the sea level at high water; it could be seen from the decks of ships about 17 miles, and from their mastsheads nearly 26 miles. This building is now the Officers' Mess of the regiment quartered in Fort St. George.

Prior to 1910, the Council of the Governor of Fort St. George held their meetings in a room in the Secretariat buildings. The enlargement of the Legislative Council in that year made a new Council Chamber necessary and the present building was constructed on the eastern side of the Secretariat. The further enlargement of the Council under the Reforms rendered still more accommodation necessary and this was provided by adding a second storey to the buildings of 1910. The black pillars in the building are of historical interest. In the thirties of the 18th century, Governor Pitt constructed a handsome colonnade from the Fort Square to the Sea Gate roofed over and lined with 32 pillars of Pallavaram gneiss. When the French captured Madras in 1746 they carried off these columns to Pondicherry. There they remained until 1771, in which year the British stormed the place and restored the pillars to their former position in Pitts Arcade. The best preserved of these columns were added to the new Council Chamber in 1910 and retained in the present structure.

The Fort has four gates usually open to the public. The South Sea Gate is on the east and leads to the Beach Road. Cars and carriages can go both in and out through this gate. The North Gate is on the north and leads to the China Bazaar Road and High Court, but closed to traffic. St. George's gate is opened always and is the way into the Fort. The Walajah Gate is on the west; from where the Mount Road begins and is the exit out of the Fort. The main gate, St. George's Gate, opens on the north west and leads to the General Hospital, Peddanaickpettah and Poonamallee Road.

The Mount Road, the Poonamallee Road and the Beach Road are the three main highways in Madras. The first two are military roads. They divide the City into three big areas. When the Fort was the centre of all official activity, the servants of the Company had garden houses in Peddanaickpettah, especially towards the southern side which was reached by crossing the rivulet in the present Esplanade. The island was ordinarily their recreation ground, crossing the North River in boats. In 1714-15 a bridge which does not now exist, was constructed from the north bank of the river, where the Governor's Garden House was connected to the island. Governor Pitt had laid out north to south a "great walk on the island." The statue of Sir Thomas Munro is more or less in the centre of that "great walk." The road to Triplicane then was from that bridge over the island and the Government House Bridge which was then called Triplicane Bridge. In those days the fashionable residential quarters were in Peddanaickpettah. When the military activities of the Madras Government increased, the peace and comforts of country residence could not be had so near the military fortifications. A move to the Choultry plain in the west was open to the European residents. The famous Madras Garden houses began to appear on the Choultry plain (an open expanse which stretched south-west of the Fort from the Triplicane or Government House Bridge as far as Mylapore and the Long Tank). The need for a shorter route to the plain and in consequence for a new bridge over the North River was felt; and in 1558 the Wallajah Bridge was constructed. It was widened and improved in 1620. The Mount Road from that time ran from the Fort. It was reformed in 1795-96. It passes over the Wallajah Bridge to the Island, which still maintains its old reputation as a recreation ground. The Gymkhana grounds and Pavilion are there on the east side of the road and on the other side are the Body Guard Lines, St. Andrew's Cemetery, St. Mary's Cemetery and an open plain used for football by students and the soldiers of the garrison. In the centre is the statue of Sir Thomas Munro who arrived in Madras as Governor in 1820. He held office for seven years and on the eve of his retirement he was struck down by cholera near Goety. His statue which is by Chantrey, was erected by public subscription at a cost of £ 8,000. The Island is also the Brigade Parade ground. The road then takes you over the Government House Bridge to the old Choultry plain, but now a most busy centre of trade. The Government House Bridge (St. George's Bridge) spans the Cooum river. It was built under the orders of Government in 1805. It replaced an older structure which dated from the first quarter of the 18th century. It was extended in 1923 to admit the passage of the tramway and now becoming popular under the name of Willingdon Bridge. On the right immediately before approaching Willingdon Bridge is a statue of the late Mr. Jutsice Boddam, of the Madras High Court erected by public subscription in 1911. The statue of King Edward meets your eye first as soon as you step off the bridge. The statue was presented to the City of Madras by Rai Bahadur Lodd Krishnadas Balamukundas. On your left is Government House. In 1681 a Garden House was completed for the use of the Governor on the site now occupied by the General Hospital and Medical College. That house was destroyed by Labourdonnais when he occupied Madras in 1746. In 1753 a new Garden House in Triplicane was acquired from the Executors of Mr. Luis de Medeiros. The house was a large one with a frontage of 130 feet and stood in a rectangular compound laid down in the Italian style measuring about 400 by 85 yards. The house was the nucleus of the present Government House. At the time spoken of the roads which now bound the Park did not exist. The Triplicane High Road ran north without deviation up to the Government House Bridge and passed within 50 yards of the House. Additions were made to the compound and park from time to time. In 1758 the Government House was occupied by the French Count de Lally when besieging Madras. He pulled down its verandahs, destroyed private houses near it and burned the village of Chepauk. The house was put in order again in 1762 and was much improved between 1766 and 1789 when Sir Archibald Campbell was Governor. The second Lord Clive however found it inadequate either as a residence or as a place for holding State entertainments. Extensive alterations and improvements in the house were carried out under his auspices between 1800 and 1802 and the Banqueting Hall which stands by the side of the main House was formally opened in 1802. The compound was extended to the Beach by including part of the Chepauk gardens which had lately been taken over from the Nawab of the Carnatic. The present Government House has a frontage of 250 feet. The Park is 70 acres in extent. During the past five years Her Excellency Lady Willingdon effected vast improvements in adding several out-buildings for the occupation of the offices and officers attached to the Government House and the excellent frontage was a most welcome and necessary addition due to Her Excellency's keen sagacity.

On your right is Nanier Park laid out in 1871. Behind it is Chintadripet. This village was founded in 1735 by George Morton Pitt in order to develop the supply of calicos and to encourage manufacture in Madras as being the best fitted in point of having shade trees for the artificers to work under. Before you reach the mile-end on the Mount Road there are the spacious sale-rooms of Messrs Spence & Co., the "Madras Mail" Office, the Clock Tower and show-rooms of Messrs P. Orr & Sons, Jewellers and Diamond Merchants. At the mile end is the Maharajah of Vijnanagaram's fountain. The place is known to gharivalas and coachmen as Round Tannah. The "Hindu" Office is there; Wallajah Road from Chepauk and Triplicane, Ellis Road from Pudurpakum and Tiruvateeswaranpet, Harris' Road from Komaleeswaranpet, Pudurpet, and Egmore, meet at the mile-end. Triplicane was granted to the English about the year 1658. It is a purely Hindu suburb with an ancient Vishnu Temple which, in September 1672, was occupied by the Moslems and in March 1678 by the French, and in September the same year by the Dutch. It barely escaped demolition that year. Chepauk is a very congested portion of the City inhabited mostly by Muhammadans who were all dependent on the Chepauk Palace. It contains a big mosque built all in granite, an imposing structure in the midst of squalid dwellings of the Muhammadan poor. Tiruvateeswaranpet is to the north-west of Triplicane. It contains a temple of Siva. It was in the early part of the 18th century considered to be outside the Company's bounds. Pudurpakum was granted to the English by Nawab Muhammed Sayid in 1742. Amir Mahal, the residence of the Prince of Arcot, is there. Komaleeswaranpet is a neat little suburb where a few respectable Hindu houses in modern style have been built. The bridge over the Cooum at that place, called Harris bridge, is only a recent construction. Pudurpet, further to the south-west on the Harris Road, contains Indian Christians, Muhammadans and a large Pariah population. The Government Ophthalmic Hospital founded in 1819 at Royapettah is located on the outskirts of this suburb. It has established a reputation as one of the best hospitals in the world. The Madras Reserve Police is quartered here. Egmore, which is a little further off, is considered the healthiest place in Madras; at any rate, it is not so congested as other parts of Madras. It was granted to Governor Higginson by Visier Assad Khan in 1698. The South Indian Railway Station in Egmore has a splendid frontage to the south with two fine porticos. It has been built in the popular Hindu-Saracenic style. The Arni House of the Jagirdar of Arni is a fine specimen of domestic architecture by Indian nobles. The Presidency Training School for Mistresses is situated in this suburb. The Victoria Technical Institute, the Government Central Museum, the Connemara Public Library and the Government Maternity Hospital are in the Pantheon Road, which separates Egmore from Pudurpet. The Museum was founded in 1851 with a collection of geological specimens presented by the Madras Literary Society which was then a scientific body and the duplicates of the articles sent to the Great Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park. Its habitation then went by the name of "The Pantheon." Around it has grown the pile of buildings which the visitor to the Museum sees.

The Pantheon was built about the year 1778 by Hall Plumer, a Civil Servant and contractor. It came to be used a few years later as "Public Rooms" or "Assembly Rooms." It was purchased in 1793 by a committee formed to regulate the amusements of the settlement. The Committee was designated, "The Madras Assembly." The dramatic entertainments, balls and dinner parties which took place there were controlled by a master of ceremonies who in 1802 was Mark Roworth. Lord Clive gave a ball and supper at the Pantheon on Monday, February 28th, the birthday anniversary of George the Third. An Armenian merchant (Morat) purchased the building in 1821, from whom the Government took it in 1830. It was allotted as the Collector's Cutcherry, and it is still known to the common people more as the "Collector's Cutcherry" than as the Museum.

The Museum contains an archaeological section of much value. Sculptured marbles from the railings of the Buddhist stupa at Amaravati, a fragment of Buddha's bones, a collection of arms and armour from the Fort St. George Arsenal and the Tanjore Palace, and a valuable collection of coins which some years ago suffered a loss by theft. The Connemara Public Library was opened in 1896 and attached to the Museum. The marble statue of Lord Cornwallis, which stood in the Fort since 1800 and had suffered damage owing to exposure to sea air and other causes, was early in this century renovated by the well-known Indian artist Mhatre and transferred to the interior of the Connemara Library. The semi-circular building in the front is a theatre, to seat about 400 persons, provided with a stage adapted for lectures, conferences and charitable entertainments by amateurs. The Madras Dramatic Society generally gives its performances in this theatre—a memory of the old Madras Assembly! The Victoria Technical Institute owes its origin to the public demonstrations of loyalty and love to the Queen Mother Victoria. South Indian industrial products may be seen exhibited there. It is under the control of a committee of Europeans and Indians. The Government Maternity Hospital was founded in 1844 by public subscription and managed by a committee with State aid. In 1847 the Government assumed charge of it and in 1881 transferred it to its present building. In connection with the acquisitions of Chepauk, Pudurpet and other villages there is a very amusing letter (12-12-1673) from Sir William Laughton to Brahmisa Venkataputtee, the Company's Agent at Golconda, as regards French claims to several villages round Madras. "Triplicane, you know, has always been in our hands; Yeagamour is in Hussein Jawan's [Cassia Veronice] hands and Nimyubacka, Chepauk, Pudurpet and Condour, and several other towns also which are very convenient for us to take our recreation in who have no other designs in this country, but to live peaceably and undisturbed in our business."

The imaginary visitor left Mount Road at the mile end. Now, as he resumes his walk, he finds on his left the stately edifice of Messrs. Tawker & Sons, Jewellers and Diamond Merchants, and Messrs. Whiteaway, Laidlaw & Co., the spacious sale-rooms of Wrenn, Bennett & Co. and on the right the big garage of Garage Ltd., the hospitable mansion of D'Angelis' Restaurant. On his way he may attend the service at Christ Church and take his carminative dose at W. E. Smith's Kuryl Buildings. Then if he takes the road on his left, General Patter's Road, he will in five minutes be at the Madras Club. It is eighty years old and is now a palace occupied by high European officers. Pycroft's Road, crosses Patter's Road, next to the Club. If he goes straight, there is the red-plastered Wesley College, Royapettah. Gopal Baugh comes next. The road passes through Royapettah by the newly-built Royapettah Hospital which was maintained by the Corporation of Madras, up to October 1919 and afterwards handed over to the Government. At the Royapettah Police Station there is a turning on the left which takes the visitor to the Lloyd Road, the Edward Elliot Road and to the Luz Church Road crossing. These three roads now contain the residences of Indians and have become the fashionable residential suburb of Indian merchants, Vakils, Judges and others. The Luz Church is about the middle of the Luz Church road. The inscribed stone bears the date 1616; but the inscription does not seem to be authentic. Evidence points to a much later date of its erection between 1547 and 1582. The origin of the name Luz is interesting. Some storm-tossed mariners vowed a church to the Virgin if they were delivered from the fury of the elements. Forthwith, a guiding light flashed out. They steered towards it and came to shore. Pursuing their way for a mile into the interior, they at length reached the spot whence the brilliance shone, only to find the light extinguished. On that spot was erected the Church of Our Lady of Light. There is a garden-house or bungalow named Luz House. Close to it in the Luz (suburb), but included in Teynampet is the "Grove" which was the residence of the Governor Alexander Davidson and which is now owned and occupied by the Hon'ble M. C. P. Ramaswami Ayyar. It was one of the houses proposed for the Observatory at the time of its establishment. Sudder Gardens, Sullivan's Gardens and the newly-built mansion of the late Justice Sundara Iyer deserve notice. From the Luz Church begins the suburb of Mylapore proper, Brodie's Road goes along the west side of the Mylapore Temple Tank. Mylapore is a town of much antiquity and is mentioned by Ptolemy. The name means "Peacock City" from the peacock standard which the old Tamil Kings of places carried. The deity worshipped is Siva as Kapaleswara. The big tank and gardens all around the place moderate the heat in the hot months. The agrarham or the Brahmin quarter of this place has no houses of any architectural value. A number of fine houses there are on the old traditional plan with open quadrangles in the interior. Mylapore still presents the aspect of a village. In 1672 the temple was occupied by the French during the siege of San Thome.

Leaving Mylapore, let him now resume his walk southwards along Brodie's Road. He will get to the suburb of Adyar. The native portion of this suburb is of no consequence. Its importance comes from its being a large fashionable European residential suburb. Some of the oldest garden houses built by the Company's servants are here. The Beachborough, Brodie Castle, Brunton Villa, Mowbray's Garden (the premises of the Adyar Club), Pugh's Gardens, Searle's Gardens, Gambier's Gardens. Outside the Municipal toll gates is Elphinstone Bridge over the Adyar, which leads to the spacious compound of the Theosophical Society, a small colony in itself laid out in a delightfully oriental style, Fowler's Gardens and Elliot's Beach, so called after E. F. Elliot, son of the Right Hon. Hugh Elliot, Governor of Madras.

Returning to the Kardyl Building on the Mount Road, opposite to which is the Lawrence Asylum Press (now Banch Government Press) built in Indo-Saracenic style, the visitor may now ramble along the Mount Road until he arrives at the statue of General Neill, of Mutiny fame. Brigadier General Neill fell gloriously at the relief of Lucknow, 25th Sept 1857 at the age of 47. The statue was erected by public subscription in 1860. The road on his right takes him to Spencer's Hotel, Connemara Hotel, and a few bungalows. This road is along the riverside and meets the Pantheon Road at Anderson's Bridge. Then on the Mount Road come the magnificent showrooms and premises of Messrs. Spencer & Co., the Elphinstone Hotel, the Thousands Lights of the Nawab of Arcot, Mackay's Garden (the first garden house built on the Cheultry plain) and St. George's Cathedral. The cathedral was built by Lt.-Col. T. F. De Havilland in 1815, Ionic in style the columns being handsomely finished with the polished plaster-work that resembles marble. The Mount Road here passes through Teynampet.

A turning to the left takes you into Cathedral Road which at the Theological College (Sullivan's Gardens) meets the Mowbray's Road. It is one of the most beautiful highways of Madras being avenueed for the greater part of its length. It separated Teynampet from Mylapore and Luz. The Adyar Club (Mowbray's Gardens) marks its termination. If at the Cathedral he had turned off into Nungambaukam High Road on the right within a furlong he would pass the Trunk Road from Bangalore. There are a number of European residences on either side. A small road on the left gets him into the village of Nungambaukam, a suburb of Madras to the south-west of Egmore. The village was granted to the English in 1718 and had a field redoubt of which there is no trace now. The turning to the east at the end of this road, along the College Road, the Observatory and the Old College takes you to Anderson's Bridge. The Observatory was constructed in 1792 under the supervision of Michael Topping. The private observatory of William Petrie afforded the nucleus of the Observatory equipments. Michael Topping was the first Astronomer and was succeeded by John Goldingham, F.R.S., who was a mathematician, engineer, architect, editor, and astronomer combined. He had worked before this as assistant to William Petrie in his private observatory. Petrie was one of the ablest civil servants of the Company. His range of knowledge was wide and extensive—Astronomy, Chemistry, Mathematics, Banking, Finance, Engineering. To a knowledge of these he combined a keen insight into administrative and literary ability. This Observatory was the first established by Europeans in the East. The establishment of the Solar Physics Observatory at Kodaikanal has reduced the work of this institution to meridian observations for determining the time and the maintenance of the time service, which is effected by the daily transmission to the Central Telegraph Office at Madras, and thence automatically throughout India, of a signal marking the moment at which standard time is 4 p. m. Observations are also made for the issue of storm warnings. The College for Junior Civil Servants was located in the Old College buildings. The spacious hall in it was long used for dramatic and other entertainments. It is now the office of the Director of Public Instruction. The Madras Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society occupies a portion of the building for its big library containing about 45,00 volumes.

The other important buildings in this suburb are the Mansion, Doveton House, Mackay's Garden, Pycroft's Garden and Tulloch's Garden. The last two are portions of Dr. Anderson's famous Botanic Garden which covered an area of about 111 acres. His name still survives in Ander-on's Bridge and Road.

At the junction of Mount Road and Cathedral Road are the Agri-Horticultural Gardens of Madras. An Annual Flower Show in February is held there. Newington House is occupied by the office of the Surgeon General. At the fourth mile-end was the cenotaph of Lord Cornwallis which has been transferred opposite to the Post Office, North Beach. The memorial was surrounded by an avenue oval drive and was the daily objective of Madras society until the South Beach Road was laid out. Sir Samuel Auchmuty was received at the cenotaph by the officers of the general staff when he returned from the conquest of Java.

Quitting the Municipal limits, along the same road, the Training College for Teachers which is situated at Saidapet, is only a few minutes' drive. Adjoining it is a red-bricked building which was once the Madras Agricultural College and Government Experimental Farm. These have now been transferred to Coimbatore and established on a wider basis. The Marmalong Bridge, which spans the Adyar, next to the Agricultural College buildings, was rebuilt by a rich Armenian merchant Petrus Uscan, at his own expense, in 1726. He has left a fund for its maintenance also. The Governor's country residence at Guindy was built in the time of the second Lord Clive, and is only about a mile from the bridge on the other side of the Adyar. The new Engineering College Buildings costing over 6 lakhs of rupees is located here. The King's Institute of Preventive Medicine and the Race Club are buildings deserving notice here. The Guindy Races have been in existence for more than a century now.

Without any more stoppages St. Thomas' Mount, the terminus ad quem of this long road, may now be reached. St. Thomas Mount which is about 3 miles from Marmalong Bridge, can be seen on the right-hand side as the bridge is crossed. It is about 220 feet above the sea level. On its summit is an old Portuguese Church called the "Expectation of the Blessed Virgin." The Church was built in 1547 and belongs to the Armenian Catholics.

The erection of Cornwallis' Cenotaph so far away from the Fort and the sea-shore needs an explanation. When the military exigencies of the Government required the clearing of a large area around the Fort, the Indian residents of the cleared ground moved into the streets of the adjoining pettahs, but the European population migrated to the Choultry plain which was easily accessible from the Fort and was on the way to St. Thomas' Mount, the health resort of the settlement from its earliest days. The roads from Bangalore and Chingleput meet very near there. These advantages made the Choultry plain a favourite place for the building of country residences. A feature of social life in the East, particularly of Europeans, has been the spending of holidays in country residences away from the busy haunts of people. The climate of Madras required it. The Choultry plain became the favourite place in the first half of the 18th century. In the beginning garden houses were built in the neighbourhood of Chepauk and Triplicane. It was one of these houses that was purchased for the Governor's country residence in 1753 and which is now the Government House at Madras. In 1758 George Mackay set the example of building on the Choultry plain. About the year 1774 applications for grants of building sites were numerous. Jone Munro estimated in 1780 that there were 500 to 600 garden houses on the Choultry plain. It is believed that Philip Stovey, who was then Civil Architect, had much to do with the beautifying of Madras by designing handsome mansions. By the beginning of the 19th century the Choultry plain, which was traversed through its entire length by a beautiful highway, became one of the most fashionable residential areas about Madras. The Cenotaph was therefore erected on the plain.

Some idea of the famous Madras garden houses may be formed from the following extracts:—

"For Sale. House on the East side of the Road leading to St. Thomas' Mount, situated between the New Church and the Cenotaph and little more than 3 miles from the Wallajah Gate of the Fort; first floor 3 feet high and second floor 20 feet; (extent) 9 to 10 cawnies. The greatest part of the ground on which the house is built is a spot on which a village was raised [sic] between 20 and 30 years ago and it was then planted with trees (Mango and Coconut). The house fronts and is open to the East and West and open to the South. Bamboo hedge [around the compound]."

"For Sale. House occupied by George Garrow built by Dr. Anderson two wells and an extensive tank—choicest fruit trees—Enclosed with a brick wall—between 15 and 20 cawnies—worth Rs 20,000, furnished."

About the style of the buildings, Mrs. Kindersley says: "The houses are neat and pretty many of them large; in all the good houses the apartments are upstairs and all on one floor; the rooms are large and lofty. Most of the houses are built with a verandah, [verandahs] which is a terrace on a level with the rooms in the ground, and sometimes in the back part of the house supported by pillars below and roof above supported likewise by pillars, with rails round to lean on. The verandahs give a handsome appearance to the houses on the outside, and are of great use, keeping out the sun 'y day, and in the evenings are cool and pleasant to sit in. But what gives the greatest charm to the houses is a material peculiar to the place; it is a cement or plaster called chunam made of the shells of a very large species of oysters found on this coast. These shells, when burnt, pounded and mixed with water, form the strongest cement imaginable; if it is to be used as a plaster, they mix it with white of eggs, milk and some other ingredients; when dry, it is as hard, and very near as beautiful as marble. The rooms, staircases, etc., are covered with it, the heat of the climate admits of an open, airy style of building which is pleasing to the eye; a roof supported with pillars is more elegant than a wall with windows and doors, besides the rooms being unencumbered with chimneys makes it more easy to lay them out in uniformity." "The houses of the English gentlemen are lofty and well proportioned and from their construction are so extremely cool that I can scarcely believe myself in the Torrid Zone," so wrote Mr. Philip Dormer Stanhope who was in Madras in 1774.

From the main Gate of Fort St. George, the Poonamallee Road takes you to the Medical College on the left; on the right is the Memorial Hall, erected in commemoration of the escape of Madras from the horrors of the Indian Mutiny. The Bible Society and the Christian Vernacular Literature Society have their premises there. The Mint Street has its southern end here. The squalid quarters, John Pereira's, which was once a fashionable suburb, has been cleared, and Railway offices have been built on the spot. Next to the Medical College is the General Hospital constructed in 1772 by John Sullivan. The inscription on the front wall that it was built in 1753 evidently refers to the removal of the hospital from the Fort. The hospital originated as an amalgamation of two formerly existing hospitals, the Garrison Hospital and the Old Naval Hospital. The former of these two structures was originally a warehouse of the East India Company and must have been built before 1759, but the exact date is not known. The Old Naval Hospital was formerly a granary, and was converted into a hospital in 1744. Considerable alterations have been made to these buildings from time to time. Facing the General Hospital and turning south to north is the Wallfax Road. Opposite to the General Hospital is the Central Station, the principal terminus of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway. The splendid building was designed by R. F. Chisholm, Consulting Architect to the Government and was built in 1873. A handsome clock tower, rising to an altitude of 136 feet surmounts the edifice. To the east of the Central Station are the beautiful palatial offices of the M. & S. M. Railway recently built. Here the road passes over the bridge which crosses Cochrane's Canal (formerly the North River). To the north of the road and along the western bank of this canal is the People's Park, Madras, which it owes to Governor Sir Charles Trevelyan.

It contains ornamental grounds with a good zoological collection. The Park is bounded on the west by Sydenham's Road and on the north by the Salt Cotture Goods Station of the M. & S. M. Ry. The South Indian Athletic Association has its ground and pavilion in the Park. The Moore Market, the new Evening Bazaar, the Victoria Town Hall, and Ripon Buildings occupy the southern portion of the Park and face the road. It is a great relief to turn from the red-brick buildings, so much in fashion now, to the Ripon Buildings (the new Corporation office) finished in white plaster producing a marble effect. This new office of the Madras Corporation was opened by Lord Hardinge on Nov. 26, 1913. The southern side of the road is occupied by Sir Savalai Ramaswami Mudalia's choultry and the Park Station of the S. I. Railway. The Madras Penitentiary is situated to the south of these and extends as far as the cut connecting the Cooum and Cochrane's Canal. The Penitentiary faces east and opens on a small road connecting the Poonamallee Road and the Island. Going westwards along the Poonamallee Road, you get to Pezarnet, where, in former days, the Moors collected land custom. The principal inhabitants are Muhammadans dealing in skins and hides. The Naval Hospital Road where the Madras Land Custom House formerly stood is north and south. The Madras Medical Stores which now occupies the buildings of the Gun Carriage Factory opens into this road. At the end of this road is the Government Veterinary Hospital. The Devon Protestant College is very near. The portion of the city is Vepery—a residential suburb of Europeans and Anglo-Indians. It was granted to the English in 1642 by Nawab Muhammad Said. Vepery was the scene of an engagement between the French and the English in February 1769. The S. P. C. K. has established a printing press here. This Society began its educational work about the year 1717. Petrus Uscan of Marmalong Bridge fame had built a chapel at his own cost in Vepery, which the Company handed over to the Danish Mission to put down the influence of Catholics in Madras. On the site of this chapel St. Matthias' Church has been built. The S. P. G. maintains a school in Vepery.

The Madras School of Arts, established about the middle of the last century, is on the south side of Poonamallee Road; to the west of it is the Scotch Kirk. It was built by the famous Engineer DeHavilland in 1821. The Church is of much architectural importance. Opposite to the Kirk and on the northern side of the road are the headquarters of the Madras Volunteer Guards. Randall's Road is on the west of this building. The Young Women's Christian Association is in Poonamallee Road. The Madras Electric Tramway Company has its power station and shed on the Poonamallee Road. For the greater part of the last century Poonamallee Road was one of the favourite residential quarters of Europeans in Madras. Indians are also now moving to this road.

Passing the Church Missionary Society's Headquarters, you come to the crossing of the road from Harris Bridge, which leads to Puraawalkum. This suburb was granted to Governor Higginson in 1698. It had a field redoubt of which there is no trace now.

A little farther off on the Poonamallee Road is "Ramamandiram" the residence of Rajah Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar's family. Landon's Garden and Dare's Garden are on this road, which here passes through Kilpauk, another European residential suburb. Then the road goes out of the Municipal limits on to the military station of Poonamallee.

Lying between the Beach on the east and Colchrane's Canal on the west and bounding the military limits of the Fort on the north and west is the most densely populated and busy suburb of Madras called Georgetown. This name was given to it in 1906 to commemorate the visit to Madras of H. M. George V as Prince of Wales. Before that it was called Black Town, a name given to the Indian quarter of Fort St. George in the early days of the settlement. Then it was the appellation of the out-town, which was practically the creation of the Company's Government here. When this out-town was pulled down in the middle of the 18th century, the name Black Town survived. It was applied to Peddannaickpettah alone at first, Muthialpettah being then called Mahratta town. So called from the fact that when in 1740 the Mahrattas threatened to attack Madras a field of fire 600 ft. wide on the north and west side of old Black Town was cleared. The ground so cleared was called Mahratta ground. Two pettahs were separated by gardens and fields and the rivulet which had its course along the Broadway; when this physical separation disappeared owing to the reclamation of those lands and the formation of new streets, the two pettahs became one, and the united town came to be called Black Town. Popham's Broadway, Davidson's Street, Stringer's Street, Umpherson's Street mark the spot which Stephen Popham reclaimed. The China Bazaar Road begins at Parry's corner and goes westward crossing the Mint Street to the Wall Tax Road. When the China Bazaar came into existence is not known but it existed so early as 1782. The formation of Popham's Broadway and the opening of shops of better class brought it into closer connection with them giving it a more respectable character. Peddannaickpettah means the town or suburb of Peddannaick. The head of the police in old Madras was called Peddannaick. The office was hereditary, the holder of which was sometimes called the Poligar of Madras. In the early years of this settlement, this pettah was the fashionable suburb. The Governor's Garden house was at the southern end of it, on the site of which the present General Hospital has been erected. The Company's washing garden was situated in the north of this town. It was also called Comerpetta from the colony of potters in the west of it near the canal. In 1774 there were 149 streets and 5,542 houses. The main street is Mint Street, which runs through the whole length of the town. The southern portion of the street is occupied by Chettis, Linga Chetti's castemen. Marwaries and Gujaratis live in the middle portion of it, which is hence known as Sowcarpet. The northern portion is occupied by various other castes. At the end of the street is the Government Printing Press in the building once occupied by the Madras Mint. The "Seven Wells," which supplied water to the garrison and the Europeans in the Fort is there, Govindappa Naick Street belongs to Komity Chetties. The wealth of Madras may be said to be in these two streets. The Godown Street and Bunder Street are occupied by piece-goods merchants—mostly Muhammadans—and petty cloth merchants. Pachaiyappa's College faces the Esplanade; a handsome structure on Grecian model. It is a first grade College training students for the Arts degrees of the Madras University. The institution is the outcome of the charity of one Pachaiyappa, a merchant and 'dubash' of the Company's days. The Hall was built in about 1840. Stringer's Street, Davidson Street and parallel streets are occupied by various merchants and Saits dealing in all sorts of goods. Popham's Broadway is an important, busy street. The street was laid out by Stephen Popham about the year 1782. It runs south to north from the Esplanade to the Black Town Wall. Before Popham reclaimed this area it was a marshy ground with slopes on either side, the monsoon and drainage water forming a channel along the whole course of the Broadway. After Popham reclaimed this ground raising up its level with mud from the Hog hill, houses were built and streets formed. There were big houses on either side of the Broadway but the channel was in existence until 1782 when Popham covered it in. Before 1782 the Broadway must have looked like a Venetian street only with this difference that the water in the Broadway channel would have been black sewage water! The Loane Square which runs along this crowded part of the town is to the west of the road. Kotwalohavadi, the biggest market for Madras, is a few yards from here. Stephen Popham was a solicitor. Mrs. Fay describes him as "one of the most eccentric of beings." He is a perpetual projector, a race whose exertions have frequently benefited society, but seldom, I believe, been productive of much advantage to themselves or their families. He is at present laying plans for building what is called "The George Town" to a great extent and confidently expects to realise an immense fortune." At the southern end of the Broadway on the eastern side was Signor Niccalao Mannoio's garden. He was a Venetian physician who practised in Madras about 1686 after having seen service under the Moghul Emperors. His Storie Du Mogor contains a record of his experiences in India. The Y.M.C.A. building fronts the Esplanade. It is a superb structure built entirely of the beautiful sandstone brought from a quarry forty miles north of Madras. The Armenian Street contains the Roman Catholic Cathedral which was erected by the Capuchins in 1775, and the Armenian Church. Many commercial firms have their offices in this street. The two Chetti streets, which are now being usurped by hardware merchants, lawyers and students, go up to the old north wall of Black Town. The enterprising Nattukkotta Chetties have their quarters in Coral Merchant Street midway between the two streets towards the north end. This is surmised to be the site of an old pettah, Pagadalapettah or Coral Town. The Company of those days traded in corals. The Christian College with its hostels, Principal's House, Halls and Association Rooms occupies all the southern portion of these streets. Between Armenian Street and Thambu Chetti Street rise the grand building of the late Agra Bank (now owned by the Chartered Bank of India, China and Australia). Facing the College on the Esplanade is the statue of Dr. William Miller, C.I.E., the popular Missionary Educationist of Southern India.

On the Esplanade Maidan rise the grand pile of buildings of the High Court with the Madras Lighthouse erected on the central cupola; the old Lighthouse built of granite, a high column, chaste in design and execution, erected in 1844; the newly built Law College. The High Court was completed in 1892 and is a specimen of the Hindusaracenic style of architecture. On the north side is the Rev. Dr. Miller's statue facing the Christian College. The Christian College, a large and successful missionary institution, was founded in 1817 by the Rev. John Anderson. Adjoining the High Court Buildings is the Law College which was occupied in 1899. North is situated the suburb of Royapuram. A large community of Roman Catholic boatmen have long been living here. The shipping trade of the port of Madras has had to suffer a little in the past by the opposition of this community. These Christians have built a Church out of their funds. The Madras Railway had its terminus in Royapuram some years ago. During the siege of Madras by the French in 1738-59 the enemy had erected works in Muthialpettah, one at Parry's Corner and the other south of it; and the place was practically occupied by them. In 1774 there were in Muthialpettah 16 streets and 3,208 houses according to Popham's computation.

The Madras Beach is divided by the Fort St. George fortifications and military zone into two big divisions. The North Beach is the busiest portion of the city. The Madras Harbour and its works and the premises of Oil Companies cover even the sands. Clive's Battery was previously to the north of the Harbour. Facing the sea on the road are Parry & Co., the National Bank, the Imperial Bank of India, the General Post Office, Best & Co., Mercantile Bank Buildings, the Bentinck Buildings of the Indian Bank, the Sea Custom Office, the Biden Home and a number of commercial firms. South of this range of big buildings come the High Court, and the Lighthouse and the old lighthouse column, then the Fort with the steeple of St. Mary's Church and the flagstaff; passing the Fort you get to the old Band stand which was the favourite resort in the evenings before the South Beach Road was formed. On this site there existed in Pitt's time a fishermen's hamlet. Napier Bridge, reconstructed quite recently, spans the Cooum at its mouth. Except during the rainy season a bar of sand forms itself there and closes the mouth of the river, whose current is not strong enough to force its way through the bar into the sea. To prevent the stench from the silvery Cooum becoming a nuisance during the hot season, the bar is opened artificially and sea water is let in by the tidal action. The Marina on the South Beach is a creation of the Governor, Sir M. E. Grant Duff. He himself described it as "one of the most beautiful promenades in the world." It runs along the sea front up to the suburb of San Thome. The Octagonal Marine Villa, the Senate House designed by Chisholm and Queen Victoria's statue by its side, the Chepauk Palace of the Nawab of Arcot (now used as the office of the Board of Revenue) which was constructed about 1765, the Public Works Offices, the Presidency College designed by R. F. Chisholm, the Ice House, built about 1840 to store natural ice which came from America (now the Widow's Home), the Capper House (now part of the Queen Mary's College for Women), the old Masonic Temple (now the office of the Inspector-General of Police) and the San Thome Cathedral are on the sea front on the South Beach Road and give to the city grandeur and architectural richness. Opposite the Presidency College, on the beach, is the Aquarium, which contains an interesting and representative collection of the fish found in Madras waters.

The Senate House, offices of the Board of Revenue, the Public Works Secretariat and the Presidency College are all situated in the Chepauk Park, which is divided into two halves by the Buckingham Canal running north and south the whole length of Madras. Portions of the offices of the Board of Revenue formed the Old Chepauk Palace built by the Nawab Wallajah in 1770 and became eschewed to the Government on the death of the last titular Nawab of the Carnatic in 1855. The other and western portion is occupied by the Madras Cricket Club Ground and Pavilion, the Victoria Hostel for students erected by public subscriptions and managed by a Committee and the Government Hospital for Women, which was built by the Raja of Venkatagiri and public subscriptions and opened in 1891 and taken over by the Government recently.

San Thome was founded by the Portuguese about 1522. Roman Catholic Christians have long associated this town with the Apostle St. Thomas. Tradition asserts that he was buried in San Thome and his tomb is still shown. Leaving this as a debatable matter not pertinent to the founding of the town and its growth, an examination of the records of the 16th and 17th centuries and the contemporary accounts of European travellers point to 1522 as the probable date of its founding. A church was at first built with a small monastery attached to it. It is the oldest European structure in India. Gradually a town grew up around it. In 1558 Rama Raya of Vijayanagar came here in great hopes of plunder; not finding it—as he had expected—he left the place in peace. It rose to importance between 1667 and 1682. The fame and popularity of the place increased. More churches were built. It enjoyed a large trade. Master Caesar Frederick described it in 1667 as “the fairest in all that part of the Indies.” Balbi, a Venetian dealer in gems, who visited the place in 1682, refers to its fortifications. Then began its decline. In 1616 the inhabitants were found to be killing one another without any regard for human or divine laws or any shame, so that even the Moors and Gentile, abominated their wickedness. The occasion was what they call Points of Honour. De Rezende’s account (1635) refers to the city being “continually harassed by the Hollenders” with the result that it was reduced both in population and commerce. When the English established their settlement at Madras the Portuguese readily accepted the English invitation to settle in their place. Its power had waned so much that in 1662 when it was threatened by the Dutch and besieged by Golconda, it yielded to the Moslem power, who held it for 11 years. Dominic Navarette, a Spanish priest who in 1662 came to San Thome, Madras, says: “We went to see the city of St. Thomas; the Moors would not let us in. From the gate we saw some good buildings the walls were very high. A gentleman that was with us lamented that loss very much. The English are not strong at Madraspatnam yet they hold it and are likely so to do. What signifies walls and bulwarks where there is no Government.” How pathetic and true this remark! In 1672 the Moslems were ousted by the French who occupied it till August, 1674. The two years of French occupation was a period of a prolonged and continuous blockade by the Dutch and Moslems. The Dutch and the English fearing French designs to regain San Thome suggested to the Moslem the destruction of the whole town. But the Moslem Governor of the town would not entertain any proposal to destroy “so fine a town.” Its fortifications, however, were partly demolished in 1675. The King of Golconda leased the place to Cassa Verona. But the Portuguese in August 1688 resettled it and took on lease from the Mogul. In 1697 its fortifications were pulled down by Muhammadans. An earthen rampart was built by them in 1702. The town was granted to the English by Muhammad Ali and English colours were hoisted there on 2nd October, 1749. Benjamin Robins planned a redoubt at San Thome in the house now called Leith Castle. The redoubt is now a ruined building with massive walls of brick. The old St. Thomas Cathedral has been recently replaced by a new structure. Owing to its convenient distance from Fort St. George, San Thome offered to the enemies of the English and deserters a safe retreat before the town came into English possession.

It is now more than 273 years since the English formed a settlement in Fort St. George. Their possession was only interrupted for about three years (Sep 10, 1746 to Aug. 13, 1749) when the French occupied it. From 1782 up till 1914 it had not been attacked from outside enemies, though there were times of anxiety during Tippu’s wars, the Mahratta war, Pindari incursions and the great Indian Mutiny. Before that, the Fort was frequently threatened. The proximity of San Thome was the source of trouble with the Portuguese in the earlier years. Between the years 1655 and 1657 Fort St. George suffered from Muhammadan incursions and the siege of Madras by Krishnappa Naik. In 1670 Madras was blockaded by a General of Nawab Necknam Khan. The blockade of Madras by the Dutch during the second siege of San Thome in 1673 extended even to Fort St. George. Lingappa, Governor of Poonamallee, stopped all provisions and ordered a strict blockade of the fort in 1678.

Daud Khan was hovering round the place in 1700 and started a regular blockade which lasted for four months in 1702. The French attacked and took Madras in 1746 and again besieged the Fort in December 1758, the siege continuing up to the middle of the following February. Tippu at the head of his cavalry approached so near as Chintadripettah and raided the suburbs in 1767. Early in 1769 Haidar Ali came to the Mount with no friendly intentions and Madras was saved from an attack by the peace which was at once concluded by Dupre at St. Thomas Mount. Again in 1714 Haidar raided St. Thome, Triplicane and the Choultry plain. For the last time the Fort was threatened by Haidar’s horse in 1782, when St. Thome was plundered. These incursions and raids always resulted in making the fort stronger and better fortified.

The climate of Madras has been well described as three months hot and nine months hotter. Thomas Bowrey, who visited Madras 1649, described it as “not at any time, very cold or on the contrary very hot, having the full benefit of all sea breezes of wind but in these following months, May and June, although there be for the most part fresh gales, yet it is something sulphurous, which may most of all be alleged to the wind, itself, more than to the heat of the sun.” The mean temperature for the whole year is 83°, for the cooler months of December and January 76°, and for the hottest months of May and June 90°. The extremes are 64° in January and 110° in June. The annual rainfall based on the figures for 85 years is 49 inches. Like other places on the Bay of Bengal, Madras is liable to severe cyclones. The cyclone of October 1746 damaged the French fleet severely, that of 1782 deprived the town of rice and created a famine. The city cannot boast that it is healthy to native life, though to Europeans it is salubrious enough. European travellers have all praised its healthiness; Captain Roger Middleton described it “as a place healthful, using all kinds of recreation save hounds.” Mrs. Kinderly wrote in 1760: “the heat here is excessive, but the climate for India is esteemed healthy, and people frequently come here for the recovery of their health from Bengal, for the soil is dry, and the benefit of the sea breeze, which constantly blows from between twelve and one of noon till the same time at night, is a great advantage." Mr. Stanhope in 174 quoted with approval the description of Madras as "the Montpellier of the East. These impressions were formed in the cool garden houses of Madras. Quite a different impression will be formed by a visit to the Indian quarters of the City. The tanks to the west and the rice fields within its limits keep the subsoil water at a high level. About the sanitary condition of the George Town, Mr. Popham wrote in 1872, "There are no regular drains to carry off water or any well or sewer or other provision made to carry off the ordure, etc., of each house. The consequence is that, exclusive of the effect of the monsoon on the streets, each day's consumption in every family render them disagreeable to passengers, and the digestion of the day is thrown on the first rubbish spot where the menial servants can empty it with impunity." Things had not improved in the early years of the last century, for sanitation was not practised by the people nor by the authorities of the day. Presentments of the grand Jury refer to the very defective condition of the drainage of the town. But for the warning given by stench and effluvia, people would not have attended to the improvement of drains. What Popham said of his time is true even to-day in some of the smaller streets of Madras. The utilisation of the Coom as a drainage channel is a contributory cause to the bad health of the town. Now that sanitation has been recognised as a science Madras may soon hope to see an improvement in its public health.

The internal administration of the city is in the hands of the Municipal Corporation, which consists of a President elected by the members of the Corporation. The President is assisted in his executive work by an Engineer, a Health Officer and a Revenue Officer. Its working is governed by a Legislative enactment. The history of this Municipal Government is full of interest and very much resembles that of any English Municipal institution with some features of Indian village government.

Madras like any other South Indian village, had its headman or adhi-kari, its accountant or Kanakapillai and its watchman or Peddanaik. In the early years of the English settlement, the native adhi-kari was the governor of the town and administered justice to the Indian inhabitants. The incumbent was sometimes an Indian and sometimes a European. He held his court at the choultry or town house. When in 1661 the Agent became Governor with judicial powers in consequence of the irregular exercise of powers by the adhi-kari, the office of adhi-kari ceased to exist. The Kanakapillai or Town Kanakapillai was his chief assistant and kept the Land Registers and maintained the revenue accounts. The choultry was a court of petty causes, a custom house, and a Registration office for the record of sales of real property and for the licensing of slaves. The Peddanaik was the head watchman with a number of tallies to assist him. He arrested wrong doers, confined them in gaols pending their trial before the Governor and in cases of thefts or robberies he was to compensate the losers. The offices were all hereditary. When the adhi-kari ceased to exist there remained only two offices, the Town Kanakapillai and the Peddanaik. The Town Kanakapillai's office was suspended in 1693 in deference to the wishes of the Company.

The European adhi-kari (Agent and Governor) being an Englishman proposed in Aug. 1678 "after the manner in England a way for keeping the town clean by taxing every house at a moderate rate, and to appoint a scavenger to collect said moneys and therewith to hire coolies to carry away the dirt and filth which, as in all other towns in these countries, lies in the streets very offensively." The conservancy rate was $\frac{1}{4}$ to 1 tanam per house; the total assessment was 110 $\frac{1}{2}$ tanams. Two-thirds of it went to pay the wages of four coolies and one-third to the Town scrivener or Kanakapillai. The Christian town was to pay the cost of its conservancy and the George Town to meet its cost. About the end of the same year a clerk of the market was appointed to prevent frauds and abuses in weights and measures and to preserve good order in the market on a monthly pay of 140 tanams. In this imposition of a tax on the people though the people might have agreed to pay the contribution, the Governor and Council did an act not sanctioned by the Charter or Laws of England. But it passed unquestioned for many years.

The recognition of the city as a body corporate and politic with rights and privileges to administer its own affairs independent of outside control is a growth of the middle ages in Europe. The Dutch had extended this system to their possessions in the East, including India. At the instance, apparently, of Sir Josias Child, who was an admirer and advocate of the colonial policy of the Dutch and directed the policy of the Company at home, a charter was issued by the Company, under the authority given to it by the Royal Charters by which the "Town of Fort St. George (commonly called the Christian Town) and city of Madraspatam and all the Territories thereto belonging not exceeding the distance of ten miles from Fort St. George was constituted a corporation . . . by the name and title of Mayor and Aldermen and Burgesses." The Mayor and Aldermen and Burgesses were constituted a body corporate and politic. A very important feature was that the Burgesses were representatives of the several castes and communities in the Town. The Mayor and Aldermen were a Court of record, the Mayor and 3 senior Aldermen being Justices of the Peace. The Mayor's Court had jurisdiction over Civil Suits and offences. The Corporation had other duties; building a Town Hall, Schools, common Shoars (sewers) for the ornament and healthfulness of the place, etc. and regulating and passing the streets and lanes in town. The building of a Hospital and the walling of the town would seem to have been included in the scope. The Charter came into force on September 29, 1618. But funds had not been provided to carry out these works until May 1689, when the petty taxes of paddy tolls, measuring and weighing duties and brokerage, and the Government share were assigned to it. The Corporation slept over this business till 1691, when Governor Yale demanded the restoration of the revenues collected by the Corporation. The Corporation in 1692 wanted the assignment of taxes (for licensing of public houses, etc.) in place of the measurers' duties which had been taken away from it. The paving of streets was begun in 1693. Footways were paved with brick and roadways were of sand. The cost was met by assessment on houses in proportion to the area of pavement in front of each house. Up to 1694 scavenger's rates were being collected by a Company's official. In December it was decided to transfer it to the Corporation subject to the condition that the conservancy of the town was managed by the Corporation. In 1695 the Company directed that the Town Kanakapillai's duty at 10 fanams on every pagoda of custom collected be granted for ever to the Corporation for beautifying and adorning the town with useful and necessary buildings. It was, however, being collected by the Government and appropriated for other purposes. In 1725 the Corporation complained of lack of sufficient funds to carry out their objects; and the Government handed over to it the surplus funds it had under Town Kanakapillai's duties. Among the works which the Corporation carried out were bridges, reclamation of the Island, paving with bricks the roads in the white town, repairing banks, sinking of wells, etc.

The Charter of 1726 excluded heads of castes and communities and so deprived the Corporation of its representative character. There were no Indians or members of the other communities among the Aldermen to decide cases between natives. It was designed for the government of Europeans primarily. The charges of Mayor's Court were met from the collection of weighing and measuring duties and from fines. A contribution to the Charity School was also being paid by the Corporation. In Governor G. M. Pitt's time there were again complaints from the Corporation of insufficiency of income. The policing of the George Town had come for consideration before G. M. Pitt, and he ordered the Rental-General to canton the town into proper districts. In 1735 the number of conservancy carts was increased from 13 to 19. In 1744 the Government resumed all the duties and paid instead 50 pagodas per mensem. Under the Charter of 1751, the Mayor's Court could exercise civil jurisdiction over natives only in cases in which they had agreed to abide by its award. The exclusion of the inhabitants from the Charter took away the Municipal character of the Mayor and Aldermen, who constituted merely a judicial tribunal with jurisdiction over some special communities.

The enforcement of the regulations for the conservancy of towns is best done by Police constabulary. The organisation and reform of the Police was therefore of primary importance in civic progress. Governor Josias Duple turned his attention to the subject. He separated the Police from the other affairs of the settlement. The President and Council sat as a Board of Police. Streets were paved under the orders of this Board, the house holders paying the cost of portions adjacent to their properties and the Government the remainder; public lamps were erected in the Fort and the George Town; regulations were framed for the holding of markets; the sale of fish was brought under control; a regulation for the hire of servants, etc., was passed; and a Court was established to settle cases in which customs of the natives were in dispute. This Board existed only a little more than twelve months. In the first place the constitution of this Board was according to the best legal opinion ultra vires and illegal and repugnant to the Charter; and one Mr. C. Bromley, Attorney in Madras, led the opposition to Government's action. There were external dangers from foreign enemies which occupied the attention of the President and Council. To make matters worse the Board came into collision with the Mayor's Court. These causes led to the dissolution of the Board on March 18, 1771. In 1776 the Company's Scavenger issued regulations for the prevention of nuisance in George Town; carts and cows not to be kept in the streets; each house to have a cesspool, fish to be sold in a separate market. There were 70 scavenging carts. A native overseer for the market was appointed in 1777; prices of provisors were regulated; and the hire of palanquin boys was fixed; a guard and poligar peons were attached to the Choultry's office to prevent riots, to maintain peace or order in the markets and streets, and to patrol the streets in the nights. Three years later a Superintendent of Police was appointed.

In 1783, the heavy arrears in the collection of scavenger's rate and the inadequate conservancy of George Town were reported to Government. "A number of the inhabitants instead of keeping sinks in their backyards with channels to convey the muddy water thereto, let it pass into the open streets, which not only rendered it very offensive but extremely unwholesome." The Rental General and Scavenger to Government despaired of any success in sanitation in these circumstances. The unwillingness to pay taxes and the resistance to this imposed by the lawyers and merchants was becoming a standing feature and a scandal. The Supreme Court at Calcutta gave their decision against the Government as regards their right to levy rates. Lord Macartney assembled the inhabitants and obtained their consent to the tax,—the consent being subject to the appointment of a native scavenger. There were now 80 carts where 200 would just meet the need. Mr. J. Daniell thus described the state of the town in 1785: "It is even become unwholesome to reside in the George Town. The streets in time of rain are deep canals of water, and many of the houses on each side of these canals are sunk beneath the lumps of rubbish and filth collected there, from whose exhalations after rain it is rendered dangerous even to the inhabitants accustomed to it." The contract system of cleaning the streets was introduced in 1786, the contractor agreeing to keep 70 carts, 120 bullocks and 80 buffaloes. Popham's plan for the establishment of a Police for the better government and regulation of the Town was before Council. The residents complained of dearth of provisions, frauds by dealers, the dishonesty of servants, artificers, coolies, etc., bad roads, nuisance in the streets, and robberies and thefts. A committee was appointed to consider the matter and decide remedies. The founding of a general market was recommended; the scavenger's rate voluntarily paid by the people was to be continued; but they could make no recommendation as regards Police—the very word "Police" was taboo to the hair-splitting lawyers and to the Company. They recommended the retention of the appointments of kotwall and scavenger and the appointment of a committee of Police.

In August 1786 the Government appointed a Committee of "Regulation" avoiding the word Police. The maintenance and repair of roads were placed in charge of a superintendent of company's gardens, a new appointment created in December. In the following year Kotwalchavadi was built and a regulation of prices of provisions, etc., was passed. The law officers in England pronounced against the scavenging rate, which was therefore suspended in December 1790. The Company at the same time applied to the Government for Parliamentary sanction to levy taxes. In 1791 the Committee of Regulation was abolished as also the offices of scavenger and kotwal. At length the long desired power was given by an Act of George III. Additional Justices of the Peace could be appointed by the Governor-General. A Justices' department was created. The Justices had judicial and administrative functions.

The Statute legalised the collection of assessment on houses and lands in the Presidency Towns for expenditure upon their good order and Government. Municipal Government proper in Madras began only in 1794. The Justices in Session had a sort of control over the local Police; they collected the assessment, attended to the making and maintenance of roads, the sanitation of the town. Town cleansing was effected by contract under the control of two officers called 'Surveyors and Collectors' of assessment. The contractor maintained 6 carts for the Fort and 54 carts for the Black Town. In 1797 the inhabitants represented that they would have "no more cleaning and repairs"—so much was the popular unwillingness to be controlled or interfered with, even though it concerned such a vital matter as sanitation. Though a legal basis was given by this Act, the administration of the Justices in Session was not such smooth sailing as one would expect. The Town Poligar or Peddannick held office under a new cowl from Lord Hobart. A Police Committee was instituted by Lord Hobart to remedy the defect in the Charter of 1753 which prevented the Mayor's Court from interfering with Police administration. In 1806 the policing of the town was reformed, and a Superintendent of Police was placed at its head. This officer later on became the Chief Presidency Magistrate. The cost of the Police was a Municipal charge or some years. Now the Police are paid by Government. Sir William Robinson reorganised the whole Police in 1858. The finances of the Justices in Session were never quite equal to the burdens thrown on them and Government had often to contribute to its fund. The market was also under the control of the Police Committee of Lord Hobart. The supply of provisions was done by contract for some time until the complaints of mismanagement of the market by the Police reached Government. It is open to any person to sell provisions provided he satisfies rules laid down by the Sanitary Department of the Municipality. Food supply has been much improved by the establishment of the Moore Market. The making and repair of roads were attended to by the Justices in Session, the Lottery Committee and the Military Department. Street lighting was not receiving much attention from the Justices.

The drainage of the City consisted in the beginning of a few open drains with a sewer constructed later on. That system, modified and improved, continued very long. The underground system gave hopes in the beginning. The city is waiting to see what good it will do. The Seven Wells supplied water to the Fort and the shipping and to a few residents who chose to have the benefit of good water by paying for it. The Red Hills water supply scheme intended to supply water to the whole city was begun only in 1868 and completed in 1872. From 1880 onwards a number of legislative enactments have slowly improved the Municipal Government of the City and brought it to the present state. The City of Madras has an area of 27 square miles and any improvement of this extensive city means large expenditure of money which the City is not able to bear. The extent of the town, the sea breeze, the many large open spaces within it and the Marina, the park-like residences of its richer inhabitants, the absence of large mills and industries, and the Red Hills water supply, all contribute to minimise the evils due to defective sanitary arrangements. The death-rate averages 40 per thousand per annum. It usually increases during the cold and rainy seasons, and is at its minimum during the dry hot months of April, May and June. The population is liable to periodical visitations of cholera and small-pox. Elephantiasis and leprosy are endemic diseases on the coast-line; the former is generally seen in the form known as "Cochin" or "elephant leg" (Elephantiasis). The land rises slightly as the distance from the sea increases, but in no part of the municipal limits is the elevation more than 24 feet above the sea, while in many thickly-populated neighbourhoods the level is so low as to offer serious obstacles to drainage. The new drainage works are expected to do much for the sanitation of the City. The chief outlets for the discharge of excessive rainfall are the Cooum River, the main drain of Georgetown, and two minor channels between the Cooum and San Thome. The heaviest rainfall usually occurs during the north-east monsoon, as much as 18 inches having been known to fall within 24 hours. The locality of the town is liable to prolonged periods of drought as well as to heavy floods.

This short history of Madras would hardly be complete without alluding to the fact that it is the only city in India that has actually been under bombardment during the Great War. On the evening of September 22nd, 1914, the German cruiser "Emden" visited Madras and opened fire on the city. Several people were killed and injured and much damage was done to the large oil installation in the Harbour premises. A commemoration stone has been placed in the High Court wall, in North Beach Road, in the spot where a large shell from one of the "Emden's" guns exploded.

Neighbouring Places of Interest

RED HILLS.

The native name of this locality is Coil Mathavaram. The village lies in a north-westerly direction about 10 miles distant from Madras. The English name is probably derived from the colour of the soil and the undulating appearance of the country, as there are no hills here in the ordinary acceptation of the term. The formation known as laterite, which is almost peculiar to India has generally the appearance of a soil. In its normal form it is a porous argillaceous rock, much impregnated with iron peroxide. It is mottled with various tints of brown, red, and yellow, and a considerable proportion sometimes consists of white clay. It hardens on exposure and makes a useful building stone. Some of it has recently been shown to contain a large percentage of hydrates of alumina, the ores from which aluminium is made. This place furnished laterite for the building of Cogan and Day's Fort St. George. Until about the middle of the 18th century, this stone was being quarried by the Company people under an agreement with the owner of Pullee—"the country where the Iron Stone grows"—a village at the Red Hills. Laterite is not now used for building in Madras; it serves as a good material for metalling the roads with. One of the earliest railway schemes in the Presidency is connected with the Red Hills. A light railway was in the early part of the last century constructed from the Red Hills to bring into the City the laterite required for road-making. A large lake was the centre of attraction in former times, and in its vicinity were several of houses belonging to inhabitants of Madras. The aspect of the place has now, however, entirely changed since it has become the fountain-head of the Madras Water Works. The Red Hills Lake has a capacity of 100 million cubic yards; all the water is not available for supply owing to the low situation of the lake. The average annual supply is 415 million cubic feet, which is insufficient for the needs of the City. The Corporation of Madras is contemplating pumping the water to the top of a ridge, 90 feet above sea level near the lake, to be supplied from thence to the City. This has not yet been done, but the supply has been materially improved by elevated filtering beds, opened a few years ago. Better rail roads made it an easy matter to go for change of scene and air to Bangalore, The Nilgiris, or Shevagoy and other outlying salubrious stations, the Red Hills and Ennore had strong attractions for the citizens of Madras. They were glad occasionally to escape from the heat and dust of the City and to enjoy the fresh breezes, boating, bathing, and other amusements available at these two places. A few people even resided permanently there, coming into Madras during the day for business and returning at night. Very close to the lake is Connur, a railway station. The water-works channel runs very near this place where there is a temple and tank. Drinking water is taken from this tank to Madras by many native residents. Many native week-enders resort to this village, which is provided with choultryes.

ENNORE.

This place is about 10 miles from the Fort in a northerly direction and may be reached either by a boat plying over the Buckingham Canal, or by the ordinary carriage road through Tondiarpet and Tiruvottiyur or by the East Coast Railway. Its Tamil name is Kattivakam. It was given to Governor Pitt in 1708 by Dhaud Khan. Its chief attraction is a large salt-water lake in which visitors bathe, fish and sail. Even so early as 1746 it was one of the three places outside Madras where the Company's servants had their country residence. It has been the scene of many regattas. The gayest time that Ennore has known was perhaps when Sir Henry Pottinger was Governor of Madras. He had a great liking for the place, and built there a commodious bungalow for his own use, which he generally occupied during the hot season. Madras society then frequently visited the place and the old Ennore Club House was seldom unoccupied by its members, who were always notable for their hospitality. The tide of fashion has since ebbed away from Ennore owing to the accessibility of other stations by railway and the prevalence of malaria. The Ennore mosquitoes are the largest and most vicious on the Coromandel Coast and nets should always be used for sleeping under. The lake contains excellent fish and oysters, and salt of a very superior quality is gathered from numerous pans, situated close to the creeks or inlets from the sea; the crystals are large and clear. It is shipped in large quantities to Calcutta and other ports. The sand dunes along the coast here have been converted into casuarina plantations by private persons. The formation of backwaters here and at Pulicat is due to the sand laden currents of the sea preventing the discharge into the sea of the water and silt of the sluggish rivers of the Chingleput District. Further north lie Poothoopank and Chintamani. The latter place contains the remains of a Hindu temple almost entirely embedded in sand, and at the former are some large plantations of casuarina belonging to private individuals.

PULICAT.

The village is an old Dutch settlement formed about 1609. The Dutch called their fort Geldria. After 1871 and until it was finally ceded to Great Britain in 1845, it was sometimes in the possession of the English and sometimes in that of the Dutch. It was once a sanitarium much frequented by residents of Madras, but the prevalence of malaria has deprived it of its popularity. Lord William Bentinck once had a house at this place. It is chiefly inhabited by Lubbays and low-caste Hindus. The wealthier inhabitants carry on trade with Singapore and Malacca, and the common people are chiefly fishermen. Scarcely any trace is left of the old Dutch fort, but the ancient burial-ground, preserved from decay by Sir C. Trevelyan when Governor of Madras, contains many well-cut tomb stones, some of them nearly 300 years old. Roman Catholics resort to this place in great numbers on certain of the Church's festivals. The distance from Madras is by canal 25 miles. Visitors to Ennore make excursions to Pulicat by boat, a pleasant journey of five or six hours. The lake which lies between Coromandel and Pulicat, named after the latter place, is a beautiful expanse of water about 37 miles in length and from 3 to 11 miles in breadth.

COROMANDEL.

This retreat is separated from Pulicat by the lake just named and is bounded on the east by the sea. It is a pleasant place, and like Ennore, is visited during the hot season. The etymology of the name of this place has been variously explained, but it appears to be a corruption of karimandal (black sand), the black sand so extensively used in former days in public offices and by the people, instead of blotting paper. "Coromandel," as applied to the East Coast, is said to be derived from Cholanmandalam, i. e., the region of the Cholas, an ancient dynasty, who at one time inhabited this part of India. This village, called in Persian correspondence Shamschapuli, was granted in 1768 by Nawab Walajah to one Muhadin Muhammad Abu Bakar for performing the duties of Kazi in Madras, etc. His grandfather was appointed as Mulla in the Mosque in George Town in 1694. There are a few houses here furnished and favourably situated, which may be occupied on payment of a monthly or daily rent. The population here too, consists almost entirely of low-caste Sudras, Pariahs and Lubbays numbering in all about 3,000.

LITTLE MOUNT.

About four miles south of St. George's Cathedral and near the Marmalong Bridge is a spur forming what is familiarly known as the Little Mount. Tradition says that in the cave on the Little Mount St. Thomas the Apostle hid himself to escape persecution, and that he cleft the rock with a rod in his hand and obtained water from the cleft to drink, and that pursued there by his enemies he left his footprint at the foot of the hill and escaped to the Great Mount or St. Thomas' Mount. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas. A festival in connection with it is annually celebrated. A great throng of people composed of the middle and lower classes generally collect to witness the usual church processions, etc., which appear to cause great excitement. Under the arches of the Marmalong bridge may be observed various groups of excursionists, who make this their temporary abode until the close of the festival, which, as a rule, lasts for a period of ten days. There is not, however, anything historical attaching to the place and beyond the festival above referred to, it is of little or no importance. Many of the company's servants resided in bungalows at the foot of the hill for change of air. People are now resorting to the place gradually in numbers and building other bungalows for permanent habitation.

GUINDY.

A little farther south lies Guindy, which may be reached by a short drive from the Marmalong Bridge. At Guindy is the Governor's country-seat. It is in many respects superior to the Government House at Madras, and owes its modern form to Lord Elphinstone. The park surrounding Government House is very extensive and admirably laid out. A broad and well-formed road runs direct from the main entrance which presents the facade to full view. At Guindy is the Madras Race Course, one of the best in Southern India, and here also is the principal meet of the Madras Hounds.

ST. THOMAS' MOUNT.

Passing over the Marmalong Bridge and turning to the right, a drive of 3 miles along a well-laid out road, beautifully shaded by an avenue of banyan trees will bring the visitor to St. Thomas' Mount, familiarly known as The Mount. Indians call it Parangimali. This is an isolated cliff of green stone and syenite, about 220 feet above the level of the sea.

The summit of the Mount is crowned by an old Roman Catholic Church, called the "Expectation of the Blessed Virgin." The building, erected in 1547, measures 109 feet by 87 feet and belongs now to the Portuguese Mission in the diocese of Mylapore. Behind the altar of this church is a curiously carved stone cross with a very ancient inscription which Dr. Burnell refers back to A. D. 800; it is attributed to Nestorians. Translated into English, this inscription reads—"Who believes in the Messiah and in God above, and in the Holy Ghost, is in favour with Him who bore the Cross." In 1687, there was said "to be a tree on the top of the Mount which is called 'Arbor triste,' that seemeth not to flourish all the day long, but from sun setting to sun rising it is exceedingly full of white blossoms, which withered and fell at mid-day, the very leaves also shut themselves up in the day time." The Mount may be ascended for a general panoramic view of the cantonment and parade-ground of the artillery, which is always quartered here. The ascent is made by a flight of some 200 steps built by the famous Armenian Petrus Uscan at his own cost. There is also a flagstaff, which used to be a landmark for vessels standing in for Madras from the south.

So early as 1651 Agent Greenhill came to St. Thomas' Mount for hawking. Streynsham Master with a party came here in 1678 to take the fresh air at St. Thomas' Mount. In 1685 the Council purchased a garden house, it being a very commodious and pleasant place for sickly people to recover their healths at and is often made use of for that purpose. In 1758 at the time of the siege of Madras there were about a dozen garden-houses at the foot on the road to Madras, one of them belonging to General Stringer Lawrence. The French plundered and destroyed his house and effects for which he was given compensation by the Company. St. Thomas' Mount exercised a great fascination on the European residents of Madras in the middle of the eighteenth century. Eyles Irwin, a young civil servant, wrote a poem in 1774 entitled "St Thomas' Mount," the opening lines of which are:—

"Were thou, Saint Thomas, rearest thy sacred bright,
Successive beauties trick the ravished sight:
There orange-grove diffuse their sweets around,
And flowerets paint the variegated ground;
On every side ten thousand blooms appear,
Like luna circled in her starry sphere."

Lord Pigot was kept a prisoner at St. Thomas' Mount in the house of Colonel Horne who was in charge of the prisoner. The Mount became the gayest place on the Coast, and on Christmas and New Year's day as well as on Twelfth night the balls given by Messrs. Mouckton, Russel and Stone were uncommonly splendid. St. Thomas' Mount was the scene of one of the fiercest struggles of the Franco-British Wars in India on February 7th, 1759, between Colonel Cailland on one side and Lally on the other. In 1774 it became the head-quarters of the Madras Artillery.

The Cantonment below the hill contains some very handsome buildings—among them the various barracks for the Artillery, etc. The garrison Church, which is a very handsome ecclesiastical building, dedicated to St. Thomas, is said to be a copy of the historical church of St. Clement Danes, Strand, London. It was built by Government in the years 1825-26, at a cost of Rs. 42,714, and was consecrated on October 31, 1830. It will accommodate 500 worshippers. The church contains many well executed and interesting memorials of Royal Artillery officers, the most noteworthy being the famous monument to the memory of Colonel Noble, the work of the eminent sculptor, Chantrey. Over the altar there is a large painting representing the appearance of Our Lord to St. Thomas: this was painted in 1881 by Lieut-Colonel J.B. Richardson, R.A., and presented by him to the church. In the chancel of the church there is some excellent carving in wood, the work of the Rev. James Sharp, a former chaplain of St. Thomas' Mount. In the churchyard there is a handsome cenotaph to the memory of General Sydenham, a distinguished Artillery officer. The mess house of the Royal Artillery is, perhaps, one of the most handsome of the many excellent officers' mess houses in India.

An excellent Soldiers' Institute is located at St. Thomas' Mount, and is much used by the troops in the garrison. The Institute was built from funds collected by the Rev. Canon A. H. B. Brittin, M.A., to whose energy the great Soldiers' Institute at Secunderabad is entirely due. The Institute comprises a large concert hall, a billiard room, a library, reading, recreation and game rooms, a bar, supper rooms, rooms for the Superintendent, and a lavatory, with hot and cold baths. Detached from the main building is a Soldiers' Chapel or Devotional Room, and still further away, a commodious house for the accommodation of the ladies who are responsible for the internal economy of the Institute. About four acres of land are laid out for the out-door recreation of the men. Experience has proved how much the soldiers appreciate these Institutes, which are free and open without question to any man wearing the King's uniform. There are also a well-built Wesleyan and two Roman Catholic chapels.

POONAMALLEE.

This old sanitarium for British troops, is situated about 18 miles south-west of Madras. It can be reached in about two hours' drive along a well macadamised road, or by rail via Avadi. The station is by its good drainage and general salubrity well suited for a convalescent depot. The small permanent European population of the place are chiefly pensioners. There is a Cantonment Magistrate's and a District Munsif's Court here. A large and handsome hospital has been erected at the station.

This town was the capital of a local chief, styled Naick, who was subordinate to the fugitive Vijayanagar King at Ohandragiri. It was a Naick of this place who made overtures to Francis Day for the settlement of the English in his territory and granted the present site of Fort St. George with certain privileges to build a fort and to carry on trade. Subsequently a cowl was granted by the Rajah of Chandragiri which made Madras independent of the Naick of this place. The Naick at that time belonged to the Damarla family which is now represented by the Rajah of Kalastri. His successors were not friendly to the English and frequently harassed the settlement by stopping provisions, etc., going to it. The Brahmin Naick of this place in Streynham Master's time was Podela Lingappa, who rose to be the Nawab (or Governor) of the Carnatic. The place was threatened by Sivaji in 1678 and plundered by the Mahrattas in 1688. The Poonamallee District was granted to the British by the Nawab in 1730. The place became a military station in September 1777. To the east of the present Cantonment is the old Fort now occupied by warehouses, hospital, etc.

MAHABALIPURAM.

The city of the great Bali known familiarly to the English as the Seven Pagodas is situated on the coast about 35 miles south of Madras and about 5 miles north of Sadras. It is one of the most interesting, and to archaeologists, it is one of the most important spots in Southern India. The antiquities of the place may be divided into three groups—(1) the 5 rathas to the south of the village, belonging probably to the latest Buddhist period; (2) the cave temples, monolithic figures, carvings, and sculptures west of the villages, probably of the fifth or sixth century A.D. (these contain some marvellous reliefs, ranking with those of Ellora and Elephanta); (3) the more modern temples of Vishnu and Siva the latter being washed by the sea. To these last two, with five other pagodas buried (according to tradition) under the sea, the place owes its English name. Quite a host of writers have described and discussed the date of these structures; Major M. W. Carr, C. S. Crole, Sir Walter Elliot, Robert Sewell, James Ferguson and others. Still no final word has yet been said. Students of Indian art and religion have found expression in these ancient monuments, which have therefore to be studied by the natives of the country and their meaning, as they have felt it, explained. The new school of Dr. Ananda Coomaraswami have not told the world what they have to say. The ancient monuments and scriptures of India have yet to reveal their secrets of India's past. A number of coins of all ages have been found in the neighbourhood among others Roman, Chinese and Persian. In the neighbourhood there is a Brahmin village, and an excellent new rest-house affording accommodation for six persons; eggs, fowls, sea-fish and milk are always to be got. A visit to this place will well repay those who take an interest in mythological and antiquarian subjects. The journey can be made in a few hours with ease and comfort by the Buckingham Canal. There is a good metalled road from Chingleput Railway Station (Refreshment Rooms) to Sadras Bridge (18 miles) where boats are taken. Application should be made beforehand to Varatha Rajulu Chetty, although boats can often be got without previous notice. The journey is also often made from Madras by the Buckingham Canal; apply for boats to the Wharf Superintendent, the Basin, Madras.

SADRAS.

Sadras, which can also be reached by the same canal, is an old Dutch settlement formed in the year 1647. Sadras is sixteen miles by road from Chingleput and is situated on the Coast and must have been, during its occupation by the Dutch, an imposing place and flourishing town, but now it consists merely of a few houses and a native village of no importance. It was long famous for the fine muslins produced by its looms, but now there are very few weavers, and the skill which produced the once famous fabrics is gone. The town was ceded to the British along with the other Dutch possessions in 1818. The fort is in a state of ruin but enough of the fortifications remain to show the great strength of the masonry and the plan of the place. The monuments of the dead which it contains are an interesting subject of study. The former official residence of the Governor is now converted into a travellers' bungalow. It is rather a curious bamboo-roof building consisting of hall with rooms on either side and out-offices in close proximity, the whole forming a square of considerable dimensions. A short way off from this place stands the Governor's garden-house, a quaint but splendid edifice with towers, elevated terraces and curious arches. It is in a dilapidated state, and portions of it have fallen to the ground. There are still traces of a well laid out garden and splendid tanks and other objects of interest about the place.

COVELONG.

Covelong, about 20 miles south of Madras, was originally a Dutch settlement and a place of some strategical importance. Covelong possesses a Roman Catholic Church, almshouse and orphanage founded and supported by a grant from the DeMonte family, formerly rich merchants in Madras. The salt-pans to the west of the village are large and there is some export trade in this article. There is also the Schomtir Experimental pans, manufacturing excellent table salt approved by Government for public consumption and is being sold as cheap as the ordinary common salt. Excellent oysters are found here. The inhabitants are chiefly fishermen and salt-manufacturers. The ruins at present in existence belong to the fort called Saadat Baddar, built by Nawab Anwar-ud-din Khan. The fort was seized by stratagem by the French in 1750 and invested by Clive in 1652 when it surrendered without firing a shot.

CHINGLEPUT

Is 36 miles south-west of Madras and at the junction of the Chingleput-Arkonam line with the South Indian Railway main line. The District Court is located here. The District Medical and Sanitary Officer, the Sub-Collector, the Sub-Judge, a District Munsif, a Tahsildar have their head-quarters in this place. It has a Municipality. It contains besides the Reformatory School of the Presidency established in 1881 where juvenile offenders are received and trained for some useful life. Chingleput possesses the ruins of one of the most important forts in the Carnatic, a fort which is closely connected with Clive's most famous exploits, and with other important incidents of the Carnatic wars. The Chingleput Fort is supposed to have been built in the 16th century by one Timmaraja. The lake flanked one side of it and swamps surrounded it on the other sides. This advantage and the strategic position it occupied rendered the place useful and important in the Carnatic Wars. The hills around the town, the lake and the several lesser sheets of water make it a very picturesque spot, especially after the rains. The health of the town is good.

CONJEEVERAM.

Kanchi or Kanchipuram—one of the seven ancient sacred cities of India, is on the branch line of the South Indian Railway from Chingleput to Arkonam about 45 miles south-west of Madras. In ancient Tamil literature, Kanchi is described as a flourishing extensive city. The pilgrim, Tsiang, who visited it in the seventh century, said that the people of Kanchi were superior to many others in bravery, piety, love of justice and respect for learning. In his day Brahmans, Buddhists and Jains were equally numerous and influential. It came into Chola possession in the 11th century and remained with them till 1310 when Muhammadans took it. The Hindu King of Vijayanagar annexed it when they were in power. It then passed to Muhammadans in 1146; to Mahrathas in 1677, to Muhammadans again who held it till 1753 when Clive took the place. The town was destroyed by the Mahrathas in 1688 and plundered by them in 1740. In the wars of the Carnatic it was one of the strategic points and played an important part. The town was constituted a municipality in 1866. It gets its supply of water from the subterranean springs of the Nedavati river from where water is pumped into the town. The supply is abundant. The town is hot. Superior saris of silk such as Indian ladies wear, are made here. There is a large colony of weavers at Pillaipalayam, a portion of Conjeeveram. The town is crowded with temples and shrines. There is an old Jain temple of much architectural interest about two miles from the town. The Siva temple dedicated to Ekambaraswami is in Big or Siva Kanchi and the Vishnu temple dedicated to Varadarajaswami is in Little or Vishnu Kanchi. Pallava, Chola, Vijayanagar Kings have all built temples and made this historic town famous for sacred architecture. The annual festival in the month of May draws people from all parts of India to this place, for whose lodging and boarding during that season chattrams and choultries have been built by Hindu Rajahs. Archaeologists and epigraphists find plenty of material in this place.

PERUMBAKKAM.

Is a village about 14 miles north-west of Conjeeveram. It was here that Colonel Baillie's force was annihilated by Haidar Ali in 1780. This defeat has been depicted in a fresco in the Darya Daulat, Haidar's garden-house in Seringapatam.

KARUNGULI.

Is a village in the Madurantakam taluk. It is a railway station on the South Indian Railway line. It was once the head-quarters of the district and an important strategic point in the Carnatic Wars. Wandiwash, Uttaramerur, Chingleput and this place formed a sort of quadripartite on the line of attack between Madras and Pondicherry. The circumference of the Fort of Karunguli is 1,500 yards. The Fort is the "best battered" fort of the Carnatic for it was taken and retaken a hundred times and was the scene of many Homeric deeds. The most famous incident in its history was its surrender to Coote's army in 1759.

PALLAVARAM.

Is a town 8 miles south of St. Thomas' Mount. It used to be called the Presidency Cantonment, native troops being kept there for garrisoning and protecting the Presidency town. The place is healthy, though hot and water is good and abundant. It is a place of residence for European pensioners and a depot for native infantry. There were once many tanneries which have been closed by the cessation of American demand in consequence of the adoption of chrome tanning. The hills near Pallavaram contain the best specimens of Sir Thomas Holland's Charnockite series of Archaean gneissic and plutonic rocks. In 1732 George Morton Pitt erected a sea-gate colonnade in Fort St. George. It was an avenue of four rows of pillars made of thirty-two columns of Pallavaram gneiss. These columns may still be seen in the new council chamber in the Fort. Pallavaram rocks were also utilized in the construction of the Madras Harbour.

SRIPERUMBUDUR.

Is on the western trunk road 25 miles from Madras. It is the birth-place of Sri Ramanuja, the founder of the Visishtadwaita School of Philosophy and contains a temple dedicated to him executed in the beautiful style of the early Vijayanagar architecture with excellent sculpture. It is a place of pilgrimage for Vaishnavite Hindus throughout India.

TIRUVALLUR.

Is the head-quarters of the taluk of the same name and is 3 miles from the Tiruvallur Railway Station on the Madras Railway line. The town contains a temple dedicated to Siva and three to Vishnu. Siva's temple is an older building in the usual Dravidian style. The chief Vishnu temple of Sri Viraraghavaswami attracts large crowds of people on New Moon days. A bath in the temple tank and throwing of molasses into it and visit to the temple are done by devotees on that day. The place is important as the head-quarters of Ahobalem Mutt of the Vadagalai section of Sri Vaishnavites. The place was plundered in 1740 by the Mahrattas.

SAIDAPET.

Is 5 miles from Fort St. George and is the district head-quarters of Chingleput. It is practically a suburb of Madras, and, being within easy reach of Madras by the South Indian Railway line, it has been the residence of many officials, etc., working in Madras. The Teachers' College is located here. The Agricultural College and Model Experimental Farm located here was recently transferred to Coimbatore. The building is situated on the bank of the Adyar which is crossed by the Marmalung Bridge. Weaving and dyeing are its chief industries.

SEMBIUM.

Is very near the Perambur Railway station on the Madras Railway line. The Railway Workshops are here. It is almost a suburb of Madras, and being a healthy locality with good water, it is growing in population. There are many Anglo-Indians here, mostly those connected with the Perambur Works.

TIRUKALIKUNRAM.

Otherwise known as Pakshithiratham—is on the road from Chingleput to Sadras. It is an important place of pilgrimage. There is a Siva temple on a small hill, about 500 feet above sea level, and a tank at the foot. Two kites come here every day in the month and are fed by a pandaram. They are supposed to be coming here every day from Benares. A bath in the tank and three circumambulations of the hill are supposed to cure many ills, physical and spiritual. It is in popular opinion a sanitarium for consumptives.

TIRUVOTTIYUR.

Is a sacred town five miles north of Madras. It was granted to the English by Daud Khan in 1708, but it was not until 1717 when it was seized by Governor Collet, that the English had secured possession of it. A weaver settlement close to it on the road from Madras was established by Collet and bears his name Kulattipetta (Colletpetta). Tiruvottiyur contains an ancient Siva temple. It was one of the places visited by the Great Sri Sankaracharya. Every Friday the place is thronged by visitors from Madras. Valuable inscriptions in Grantha characters may be seen both inside and outside the temple. The place is malarial.

UTTARAMERUR.

Is in the Madurantakam taluk and is a town of some interest. It is believed that there was a very ancient town on this site; remains of the foundations of buildings are occasionally exhumed to this day.

WALLAJABAD.

(Called also Dandu Sivaram) is very near to Conjeeveram. The place is named after Nawab Wallajah who took that title in 1776. It was made a military cantonment in 1786, on account of its natural advantages from a military point of view. The unhealthiness of the place compelled the abandonment of it as a cantonment; but it still gives its name to the 88th Regiment of the Indian Army, formerly the 23rd Madras Light Infantry, which bears on its colours "Seringapatnam" and "Nagpur." There is some trade in oil, grain and other agricultural products. Wallajahbad was a scene of disaffection at the time of the Vellore Mutiny in 1806. Traces of the famous Wallajahbad race course are yet to be seen. The Palar river runs beside the town and the scenery is very picturesque there during the cold season.

Government Museum.

Pantheon Road, Egmore.

Superintendent—F. H. Gravely, D.Sc.,

This Museum is intended chiefly to illustrate the natural history, natural resources and manufactures of Southern India, and the manners, customs and antiquities of its inhabitants. The exhibits are arranged in two separate buildings, viz. the Old Building and the New Building (added in 1896), with the Connemara Public Library situated between them. The Old Building contains the Natural History and Archaeological sections, and also a small picture gallery in the Natural History section will be found collections of Mammals, Birds, Reptiles, Fish, Shells, Insects, Crustacea, Corals, etc. There are also Botanic, Economic and Geological sections, the last including an extensive series of South Indian minerals. In the Archaeological department, in addition to Hindu and Jain antiquities, will be found a large and interesting collection of sculptures from the Buddhist stupa at Amaravati, which are more closely allied to specimens of ancient Greek art than to anything Dravidian. An attempt has been made to reconstruct a portion of the great rail which originally encircled the stupa. There is a valuable collection of coins which can be inspected by specialists on application to the Superintendent. The New Building contains Wood and Metal work, Prehistoric Antiquities, Ethnological Collections and a collection of Arms. The exhibits include artistic manufactures from various localities, arms from Tanjore Armoury and Madras Arsenal, and a series of exhibits to illustrate the customs of prehistoric man in South India and of his descendants at the present day. Here will be found a very fine and extensive collection of South Indian bronzes, mostly from treasure trove finds, some of which reach a very high level of artistic excellence.

The Museum is open free to the public daily. Fridays excepted, from 7 A.M. to 5 P.M.

N.B.—On the first Saturday of every month, after 12 noon, male visitors are excluded and the Museum is placed in charge of female attendants to enable Gosha ladies to inspect the collections.

The Connemara Public Library to which considerable additions are made from time to time, contains an extensive series of works relating to South India and a fair supply of current periodical literature. Persons over seventeen years of age may consult books, etc., in the Reading Room daily (Fridays excepted) from 7 A.M. to 5-30 P.M. from October 1st to March 31st, and from 7 A.M. to 6 P.M. during the rest of the year. The Madras University Library is at present temporarily housed in the Connemara Library.

The following additional rules shall apply to heavy motor vehicles :—

DEFINITIONS

31. In these additional rules—

(a) the expression "heavy motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle exceeding two tons in weight, unladen,

(b) the expression "trailer" means any vehicle drawn by or attached to a heavy motor vehicle;

(c) the expression "axle-weight" means, in relation to an axle of a heavy motor vehicle the aggregate weight transmitted to the surface of the road or other base whereon the heavy motor vehicle or trailer moves or rests, by the several wheels attached to that axle when the heavy motor vehicle, or the trailer, is loaded,

(d) the expression "registered axle-weight," in relation to an axle of a heavy motor vehicle means the axle weight of that axle as registered by the registering authority in pursuance of the rules;

(e) the expression "weight," when used in relation to a heavy motor vehicle or trailer attached to it means (i) when the vehicle or trailer is unladen, the weight of the vehicle including all parts, equipment, stores, fuel, water and accumulators which are necessary for, or are ordinarily used with, the vehicle or trailer when working : provided that where alternative parts or bodies are used, the heaviest shall be taken for the purpose of calculating the weight; and (ii) when the vehicle or trailer is laden, its weight when unladen plus its lawful load including the weight of the driver;

(f) the expression "width," in relation to the tyre of a wheel, means the distance measured horizontally and in a straight line across the circumference of the wheel and between the two points in the outer surface of the tyre which are farthest apart;

(g) the expression "diameter," in relation to a wheel, means the diameter measured between the two opposite points in the outer surface of the tyre which are farthest apart.

ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS TO BE FURNISHED WITH APPLICATION FOR REGISTRATION.

32. In addition to the particulars prescribed by rule 8 above, the following particulars shall be furnished with an application for the registration of a heavy motor vehicle :—

(1) Weight of heavy motor vehicle or trailer, unladen;

(2) axle weight of each axle;

(3) diameter of each wheel.

FEE FOR REGISTRATION.

33. The fee payable in respect of registration of a heavy motor vehicle shall be Rs. 32. Such registration shall continue in force for a period of not more than twelve months from the date thereof. Registry may be renewed annually on payment of a fee of Rs. 16.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS TO BE FULFILLED.

34. The registering authority shall decline to register a heavy motor vehicle unless he is satisfied that it fulfils all the conditions special to heavy motor vehicles laid down by rules made under the Act, and in order that he may so satisfy himself, he may require the production of the heavy motor vehicle at such time and place as he thinks fit and may also cause the weight of the heavy motor vehicle and the axle-weight of each axle to be ascertained in such manner as he may by general or special order direct.

REGISTERING AUTHORITY MAY CAUSE THE AXLE-WEIGHT FOR THE TIME BEING OF ANY AXLE OF A HEAVY MOTOR VEHICLE TO BE ASCERTAINED.

35. When the registering authority or any officer duly authorized by him in this behalf has reasonable ground for suspecting that the axle-weight for the time being of any axle of any heavy motor vehicle or trailer drawn thereby exceeds the registered or marked axle-weight of that axle he may cause the axle-weight for the time being of any such axle to be ascertained.

The person driving or in charge of such motor vehicle shall to the best of his ability afford all such facilities as may reasonably be necessary for the purpose of ascertaining the axle-weight as aforesaid.

REGISTERED WEIGHT TO BE PAINTED ON VEHICLE.

36. Unless he declines, in accordance with Rule 34 to register heavy motor vehicle, the registering authority shall proceed in accordance with Rule 4 above and, upon receiving the certificate in Form C, the owner of the motor vehicle shall cause—

- (a) the highest rate of speed at which, in conformity with the rules, the heavy motor vehicle may be driven;
 - (b) the registered weight of the heavy motor vehicle unladen; and
 - (c) the registered axle-weight of each axle
- to be painted or otherwise plainly marked in letters not less than one inch in height, and in such a manner as to be legible at a reasonable distance, upon some conspicuous part of the left or near side of such heavy motor vehicle in the case of (a) and in the case of (b) and (c) of the right or offside.

CONDITIONS FOR THE USE OF HEAVY MOTOR VEHICLES.

37. No person shall cause or permit a heavy motor vehicle to stand or be used in a public place or shall drive or have charge of a motor vehicle when so used unless the following conditions are satisfied:—

- (1) (i) The axle-weight of any axle of a heavy motor vehicle shall not exceed the registered axle-weight.
- (ii) The registered axle-weight of any axle of a heavy motor vehicle shall not exceed eight tons and the axle-weight of a trailer shall not exceed four tons.
- (iii) The sum of registered axle-weights of all the axles of a heavy motor vehicle shall not exceed twelve tons.
- (2) The tyres of each wheel of a heavy motor vehicle, unless the tyres are pneumatic or made of a soft or elastic material, shall be smooth, and shall, where tyre touches the surface of the road or other base whereon the heavy motor vehicle moves or rests be flat, provided that the edges of the tyre may be bevelled or rounded to the extent in the case of each edge of not more than half an inch.

Provided also that—

(i) if the tyre is constructed of separate plates the plates may be separated by parallel spaces which shall be disposed throughout the outer surface of the tyre so that nowhere shall the aggregate extent of the space or spaces in the course of a straight line drawn horizontally across the circumference of the wheel exceed one-eighth part of the width of the tyre;

(ii) the driving wheels of a heavy motor vehicle shall be cylindrical and smooth-soled or shod with diagonal cross-bars of not less than three inches in width nor more than three-quarters of an inch in thickness, extending the full breadth of the tyre, and the space intervening between each such cross-bar shall not exceed three inches;

(3) the width of the tyre of each wheel of a heavy motor vehicle shall be determined by such of the following conditions as may apply to the circumstances of the case; that is to say:—

- (a) the width shall in every case be not less than five inches;
- (b) the width shall be not less than that number of half inches which is equal to the number of units of registered axle-weight of the axle to which the wheel is attached.

The unit of registered axle-weight shall vary according to the diameter of the wheel, and the rules set forth in the subjoined scale; that is to say—

- (i) if the wheel is three feet in diameter the unit of registered axle-weight shall be 7½ cwt.

(ii) if the wheel exceeds 3 feet in diameter, the unit of registered axle-weight shall be 7½ cwts. with an addition of weight in the proportion of one hundred-weight for every 12 inches by which the diameter is increased beyond 3 feet; and in the same proportion for any increase which is greater or less than 12 inches.

(iii) if the wheel is less than 3 feet in diameter, the unit of registered axle-weight shall be 7½ cwts. with a deduction of weight in the proportion of one hundred-weight for every 6 inches by which the diameter is reduced below 3 feet, and in the same proportion for any reduction which is greater or less than 6 inches:

Provided that this clause shall not apply to any tyre which is pneumatic or which is made of a soft or elastic material.

(4) The diameter of a wheel of a heavy motor vehicle, if the wheel is fitted with a tyre which is not pneumatic or is not made of a soft or elastic material, shall be not less than 2 feet.

(5) A heavy motor vehicle shall, when measured between its extreme projecting points, be of a width not exceeding 7 feet 6 inches, and no heavy motor vehicle or train made up of a motor vehicle with one or more trailers attached to it shall be used in any public place, if such motor vehicle or train exceeds 36 feet in length. OPENING OF CYLINDER TAPS AND BLOWING OFF OF STEAM.

38. The cylinder taps of a heavy motor vehicle propelled by steam shall not be opened within sight of any person driving, riding, leading or in charge of any horse upon the road or street, nor shall the steam be allowed to attain such a pressure as to exceed the limit fixed by the safety-valve so that no steam shall blow off when the vehicle is upon the road or street.

CONDITIONS FOR THE USE OF TRAILERS.

39. No person shall haul, by means of a heavy motor vehicle, in any public place, more than three trailers at a time, nor any trailer, unless the following conditions are satisfied:—

(i) Each trailer shall satisfy the conditions laid down for heavy motor vehicles as to registered maximum axle-weight, tyres, width of tyre, size of wheels, width of vehicles and springs, save that, in the case of a trailer, the registered maximum axle-weight shall not exceed four tons and that the minimum width of tyre shall be three inches save in the case of trailers not exceeding one ton in weight unladen which shall be exempted from the prescribed requirements as to width of tyre.

(ii) each trailer attached to a heavy motor vehicle shall have a brake approved by the registering authority and each trailer shall carry upon it a person competent to apply the brake efficiently, provided that where the brakes upon the motor vehicle to which any trailer is attached are so constructed and arranged that neither of them can be used without bringing into action simultaneously the brake attached to the trailer, or if the brakes of the trailer can be applied from the motor vehicle independently of the brakes of the latter, this rule shall not apply;

(iii) the heavy motor vehicle shall not at the time be in use as a public conveyance.

DRIVING ON BRIDGES.

(i) Where any duly constituted authority affixes or sets up in suitable and conspicuous positions, on each approach to a bridge, forming part of a highway, notices stating the carrying capacity of the bridge which, as regards all their contents or subject-matter, are clearly and distinctly legible and visible by persons approaching the bridge, the owner of a heavy motor vehicle, the combined registered axle-weight of which exceeds the carrying capacity of the bridge as specified in the said notice shall not cause or suffer the motor vehicle to be driven, and the person driving or in charge of the motor vehicle shall not drive the motor vehicle upon the bridge.

(ii) The owner of a heavy motor vehicle shall not cause or suffer the motor vehicle to be driven and the person driving or in charge of a heavy motor vehicle shall not drive the motor vehicle, upon a bridge forming part of a highway at any time when another heavy motor vehicle is on the bridge, if the combined weights of the vehicles exceed the carrying capacity of the bridge.

the speed shall not exceed 5 miles an hour:

Provided also that—if the heavy motor vehicle has all its wheels fitted with pneumatic tyres or with tyres of a soft or elastic material, the speed shall not exceed—

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 11 of the Indian Motor Vehicles Act, 1914 (VIII of 1914), the Governor in Council is pleased to make the following rules to regulate the use of motor vehicles, let or plied for hire in public places within the municipal limits of the City of Madras and its vicinity.

MADRAS MOTOR CAB RULES.

1. For the purpose of these rules a "motor cab" or taxi cab shall mean a motor vehicle which is let or plies for hire within the municipal limits of the City of Madras and which has seating accommodation for not more than seven passengers including the driver and which does not exceed two tons in weight when unladen.

2. Such of the Madras Motor Vehicles Rules, 1916, as are not inconsistent with the provisions of these rules shall apply to motor vehicles let or plying for hire.

3. No motor vehicle shall be let or plied for hire within the municipal limits of the City of Madras without an owner's permit granted by the Commissioner of Police, Madras.

4. This permit shall be in form Taxi A set forth in the first schedule to these rules. The fee for such permit shall be Rs. 5. Subject to rule 6 such permit shall remain in force from the date of issue until the 31st March following. Such permit shall not be transferable except under the sanction of the Commissioner endorsed thereon.

This permit shall be in lieu of the permit required by rule 30 of the Madras Motor Vehicles Rules, 1916.

5. The rates for the fare or hire or detention of a motor vehicle let or plied for hire shall be not more than the rates prescribed in the second schedule attached to these rules provided that nothing in these rules shall prevent the owner of a motor cab from entering into a contract to let his motor cab for periods of not less than a full day, or for trips of more than ten miles beyond the municipal limits of Madras at charges agreed upon between him and the hirer.

6. Every motor vehicle intended to be used as a motor cab shall be taken to the office of the Commissioner of Police for inspection and shall be liable to examination at such times as the Commissioner of Police may prescribe and the owner's permit may be suspended or cancelled by him if the vehicle does not comply with the requirements of these rules or of the Madras Motor Vehicles Rules, 1916, or where the owner thereof has committed any breach of these rules.

7. A permit to drive a motor cab, shall be in form Taxi B set forth in Schedule I attached to these rules.

8. No motor cab shall be driven by any person not holding a permit in the above form granted by the Commissioner of Police, Madras.

9. (1) Such permit shall be granted only to a person who holds an ordinary licence to drive, which is for the time being in force.

(2) The fee for such permit shall be Rs. 2 and it shall be in force from the date of issue until the 31st March following, but shall cease to be in force if cancelled or suspended by the Commissioner of Police or if the holder's ordinary licence to drive is suspended or cancelled or expires.

10. An applicant for a taxi driver's permit shall satisfy the Commissioner of Police that he is in all respects a fit person to be the driver of a motor cab and that he is acquainted with the principal places and streets in Madras and has a thorough knowledge of the prescribed rates for hire. A taxi driver's permit may be cancelled or suspended by the Commissioner of Police for any breach of these rules or of the Madras Motor Vehicles Rules, 1916, or if the holder should be guilty of misconduct of such a nature as to make his retention of such a permit undesirable.

11. (1) Every motor cab shall be fitted with a taximeter of an approved style to indicate to the hirer the fare chargeable.

(2) Every such taximeter shall be sealed with the seal of the Commissioner of Police or with a mark approved by him.

(3) Any owner, driver, attendant or other person who shall break or tamper in any way with the seal placed on the taximeter or who shall, with intent to deceive, tamper with the taximeter or the driving mechanism thereof shall be deemed to have committed a breach of this rule.

(4) No motor cab shall ply for hire unless the seals on the taximeter are intact.

12. (1) Every taximeter shall be tested by the Commissioner of Police or by such officer as he may from time to time depute in this behalf.

(2) Before a taximeter is produced for inspection, the holes for wires and the wires for the lead seals shall be provided by the firm fitting the meter so that all that need be done after the test shall be to slip on the lead seal and impress them with the sealing tongs.

(3) Every taximeter shall be subjected to a practical road test of five miles for each of the distance scales and a time test for detention charges for not less than half an hour.

(4) Every taximeter which passes the test shall be sealed in such a manner that it cannot be opened or tampered with without removing the seals.

13. A taximeter shall be fixed to and operated from a non-driving wheel.

14. A fresh road test shall be made by direction of the Commissioner of Police each time the meter or transmission gearing is removed or repaired :

Provided that a taximeter shall at any time be submitted to the Commissioner of Police for the purpose of being tested under his direction.

15. All brake or steering connections secured with bolts shall have such bolts secured with nuts, the same to be locked or pinned.

16. It shall be the duty of the owner to see that all parts of the mechanism of the cab are periodically inspected and kept in proper working order and a register in a form to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Police shall be kept of such inspections. This register shall be open to inspection at any time by the Commissioner of Police or by any person duly authorized by him. Any failure to maintain this register or produce it when called for by lawful authority shall be deemed to be a breach of this rule.

17. The machinery of every motor cab shall be so constructed that no undue noise or vibration is caused and shall be maintained in such condition at all times.

18. The carrying fittings shall be maintained in such a condition as not to be loose or cause any undue rattling noise.

19. Every motor cab shall have a light so fixed as to illuminate the taximeter at night.

St. Mary's Church.

FORT ST. GEORGE.

The ancient Church of St. Mary's, situated within the ramparts of Fort St. George, is not only a conspicuous landmark to all who approach the Presidency town by sea, but is also a witness to the piety and devotion of the early settlers on the Coromandel coast in the seventeenth century. Madras itself dates from the 1st March 1639-40.

A small fort was erected on the site of the present Secretariat Offices, and a town gradually sprung up around it. For about 40 years Divine Service was regularly held in one of the rooms of this inner Fort, but in 1677 Mr. Streynsham Master, on his arrival as Agent and Governor, set about collecting funds for the erection of a more suitable place of worship. Subscriptions were raised from all the English inhabitants, and it does not appear that any assistance was asked for or given by the Directors of the English Company. St. Mary's was the result of local effort entirely. The first sod was turned on Lady Day, March 25th, 1678, and the Church was completed and was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary and opened for worship on the 28th October 1680. It was consecrated by the Chaplain, Richard Potman, acting under a Commission from the Bishop of London.

The church stands to-day exactly as it was erected, with the exception of the vestry, organ chamber, and sanctuary, which were added in the nineteenth century, and the spire, which was rebuilt at the end of the eighteenth century. The chief objects of interest in this old church are as follow:—

The old Tombstones. These are situated round the north side of the church, and form a kind of pavement. These stones were taken in 1760 from the old graveyard, which was on the site now occupied by the Law College. During the second siege of Madras by the French in 1758-9, the large monuments of the old graveyard afforded shelter to the French sharpshooters. When the siege was raised, the old burial ground was dismantled, and the gravestones brought to St. Mary's and placed round the church. There are among them also some which were taken from the old Capuchin Church of St. Andrew, which was destroyed in 1749 when Madras was handed back by the French after the Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. These old stones are of great interest. The most ancient of them is that of Elizabeth Baker, the wife of Aaron Baker, the first Governor of Madras, and is dated August 5th, 1652. Most of the stones are in an extremely good state of preservation, in spite of their exposed situation.

Inside the church are to be seen many interesting objects. Below the Chancel steps are the graves of the Governors. The tomb marked simply with a cross and the words "In Memoriam" marks the last resting place of the ill-fated Lord Pigot. After having risen from the lowest to the highest station in Madras, this unfortunate nobleman was sent out again to stem the tide of corruption among the higher civilians. He was worsted in the encounter, and after having been arrested by the members of his Council, was kept as a prisoner at the Mount until he died on the 11th May 1777. The other Governors who lie buried here are Lord Hobart, April 1873, Sir Henry George Ward, August 1760 and Sir Thomas Munro, July 1827.

The monuments on the walls are worth noticing, especially those to Sir Barry Close, Joseph Moorhous, George Gilbert Keble, Joseph Webbe, and the famous missionary Frederick Christian Swartz. There are two fine statues. One near the organ is that of Thomas H. S. Conway, "the soldiers' friend"; the other, near the Font, of Hercules Henry Pepper—both of them distinguished soldiers.

Of the old regimental colours which adorn the walls and pillars, the pair behind the pulpit are of the greatest interest. They belonged to the old 102nd Madras Fusiliers (now the Dublin Fusiliers), and were carried by that famous regiment through the second Burmese War in 1852-3, and the Indian Mutiny, 1857-8.

Over the altar is a large painting of the Last Supper. This picture is supposed to have been taken from a church in Pondicherry when it was captured by the British in 1761. The painting is by an unknown artist, but expert opinion dates it as of the sixteenth century, and possibly by a pupil of Raphael. At any rate, it is a valuable historic work. In September 1910 the picture was restored by H. B. Millar. The carved teakwood railing of the West gallery was noticed by Lockyer in 1703. It is of oriental design and beautiful workmanship. The organ is by Hill of London, and was erected by the Rev. C. H. Malden in 1894.

The church possesses some very fine old silver plate and ancient records and registers. These are not kept at the church, but can be seen by appointment with the Garrison Chaplain. For a detailed account of the church and its history to the end of the eighteenth century, the reader is referred to the Rev. F. Penny's book "The Church in Madras."

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

St. Andrew's Church.

POONAMALLEE ROAD, EGMORE.

On 1st September 1815 a public notification was widely circulated in Madras, which supplied the Scotsmen of this historic city with a fertile and novel topic of discussion. It told how the East India Company had resolved to build a Scots Church in the Presidency town, for the benefit of its Scottish employees, and to establish there a Chaplaincy of the Church of Scotland; how the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland of the previous year had gratefully welcomed this resolution, how the Rev. Dr. Allan, the first Chaplain of the Church, had now arrived in Madras, armed with authority from the Assembly to proceed with the formation of the first Scots congregation in South India; and, finally, it called upon all who intended to attach themselves to the Scots Church to send in their names to Dr. Allan and four co-signatories, in order that definite information might be furnished to the Government as to the accommodation required for the new congregation.

The names and employments of these four devoted Churchmen—the earliest members of the Kirk Session—are interesting as showing the part which influential Scots in those days took in the advancement of their Church, as also as partly accounting for the generous treatment meted out to the Scots congregation by the Madras Government when the Church came to be built. With two Members of Council as builders, and, as it happened, a Scotsman, the Right Hon'ble Hugh Elliot, as Governor of the Presidency, advocacy of the Scottish claims would not be wanting. In the Church records the names are as follow:—Robert Fullerton, C.S., Member of Council; David Hill, C.S., Secretary to Government; Kerby Dalrymple, Merchant; William M. Taggart, Merchant.

To the notice thus issued a cordial response was made. Scotsmen rallied to their Church, and without further delay Divine Service, according to the rites of the Church of Scotland, began to be held. At first, in the absence of a Church, the congregation met in the College Hall, which was temporarily fitted up by Government to suit the emergency, but the question of building a Scots Church was diligently pushed forward. The size and influential nature of the congregation, which rapidly formed under Dr. Allan's ministry, gave weight to the petition which it soon sent up to Government, that the Scots community might be furnished with a church of its own. To the petition Government gave a ready assent, and requested the Kirk Session to select a suitable site and prepare plans of a suitable building for the further consideration of the Government.

The present site—the most central spot in all Madras—was secured and the work of building began. Fortunately there was then in the service of the Government one of the ablest architects India has seen—Major Thomas Frott de Havilland of the Engineers—and to him the work was entrusted. How well he did his work may be judged by the unstinted admiration which St. Andrew's Church evokes from all who see it. "Perhaps the noblest Christian edifice in Hindustan" is what Bishop Middleton's Biographer said of it,—himself no lover of the Scottish Church—and the praise is not undeserved. The foundation stone was laid by the Rev. Dr. Allan on the 16th April 1818, and it was his privilege to solemnly dedicate the Church to the service of ALMIGHTY GOD on the 29th February 1821.

The cost of this splendid edifice was about £20,000, which must be deemed exceedingly moderate for a building of this description.

The edifice may be thus described. The body of the Church is a circle 81 feet and 6 inches in diameter in the clear, with a rectangular compartment east and west of it, and a portico extending beyond the latter to westward. Over the circular part is a dome, covering as it were the nave of the Church, with an annular arch round it, over what may be termed the aisles. The architrave and frieze which stand on 16 columns are of stone, but the cornice above is of brick, and on it rests the dome; of these columns four are of granite, the remainder are of what is termed in Madras "iron stone."

The dome is constructed with but a framework of brick, running upwards from the columns towards the crown, where these ribs are terminated and united together by a circular arch of the same description. This framework is then filled in with masonry formed of cones of pottery such as are used in Syrian roofs. The thickness of the dome at the crown is only nine inches, whence it is gradually increased to nearly twice that dimension at the cornice. Over the Syrian cones before mentioned, three courses of flat tiles are carefully laid and on them the stucco is applied. The dome of the Kirk is believed to be "unique," in that a dome of masonry fifty-one and a half feet in diameter is supported on a colonnade thirty-five feet high, without beam or lintel, its height at highest point of dome being 54 feet above the pavement of the Church.

To the westward of the compartment containing the steeple stands the portico of the modern "Ionic" order upon a colonnade double its depth, surmounted by a pediment along the whole front in the tympanum, on which the sacred name JEHOVAH appears in Hebrew characters of gold on a triangle emanating rays of glory, while in the frieze below stands the name of the edifice and the date of its erection. Corresponding at the back of the building is also a triangle with two lions guarding a shield under which is inscribed.—"Auspicio Regis et Senatus Angliæ," the arms and motto of the H. E. I. Co.

The steeple stands on the tower, which is raised over the vestibule to a level with the crown of the dome, rises 111½ feet above it, and is divided into three storeys giving the whole an elevation of 131½ feet above the entablatures, and 166½ feet above the pavement of the Kirk. The steeple was completed on 8th May 1820.

The site on which the church stands was purchased for 4,000 pagodas and covers nearly 7 acres. The soil was most unfavourable, as it is throughout the vicinity of Madras. The practice which has obtained from time immemorial in this part of India to secure edifices in such cases is that of substituting wells for the pile work used in Europe. The whole of the foundation of St. Andrew's Church is erected over numerous wells from 10 to 14 feet deep. In 1885 the Church was beautified by the addition of rich stained glass windows and a marble font. The Church possesses a splendid grand organ by Comacher of Huddersfield, England. Some of the best views of Madras may be obtained from the Clock Tower, sanction to ascend which is readily granted by the Senior Chaplain.

For stateliness and general lightness of effect St. Andrew's is probably unsurpassed by any building of the same size, while the marble pavement of the aisles and the highly polished Madras chunar pillars give to the Church an air of purity and grateful coolness that is much appreciated by the worshippers. It is a church to be proud of and thankful for.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.

The Church of St. Mary of Angels.

Commonly called the Catholic Cathedral, Armenian Street.

THE Capuchin Mission of Madras was founded in 1642, under the sanction of Pope Urban VIII., by the well-known Father Ephraim, the pioneer of the Madras Mission, of whom Tavernier gives an interesting account. He was a native of Auxerre, and brother of Monsieur de Chateau des Bois, Councillor of Paris. He was destined for the Mission of Pegu, and in order to reach his destination he made a journey by land across the peninsula from Surat to Masulipatam. Before the English settlement at Masulipatam was broken up, he might have got a ship here to take him across the Bay of Bengal; but then there was none, and he was recommended to go 200 miles further south to the British settlement lately established at Madras. Pope Urban VIII. erected the Capuchin Mission into a Prefecture Apostolic. When the Friars built their Armenian Street Church in 1775, they inscribed the date 1642 over the gates as a public record of their first establishment in Madras, and, on a later occasion, when the Church was repaired and the gates widened, the number was preserved at the particular request of the oldest inhabitants. The earliest Capuchins, the founders of the Madras Mission, were Ephraim de Nevers, Zenon de Bauge, Cosme de Giers, Jacques de Bourges, Esprit de Tours, Laurent d'Angoulême, Michel Ange de Bourges, René d'Angoulême and Thomas de Poitiers. The last named built in 1675, the Church of St. Andrew within the Fort, which was confiscated and destroyed after Lally's siege. The Capuchin Fathers were permitted to minister to the spiritual wants of the Catholic employees of the Honourable the East India Company, and had free access to the Factory Albeit, they were burdened with many conditions and forbidden to hold intercourse with their religious confères in the neighbouring settlement. It is interesting to read the current of events in those far-off times. Though the English residing at Fort St. George and the Portuguese at San Thome seem to have lived in those days on rather friendly terms, there was an undercurrent of discontent on both sides, and the Portuguese could not relish the establishment of a Prefecture Apostolic at Madras. Father Ephraim, however, contrived to maintain a friendly intercourse with the Portuguese priests. In the year 1649, he had occasion to visit the Portuguese Factory; but he no sooner entered the place than he was seized by some Officers of the Goa Inquisition, and carried off to Goa in a small frigate which was then ready to sail. Father Ephraim was indebted to Coota Khan, the King of Golconda, for his release. Through many vicissitudes the Capuchin Fathers persevered in the work begun by them, and handed it down faithfully to their successors, till Father John Bede Polding, a Benedictine, was nominated the first Vicar Apostolic of Madras on the 3rd of July 1832, but he declined the appointment, and eventually became Archbishop of Sydney. The Mission was then taken charge of by the Vicar Apostolic of Bombay, Fr. Pedro D'Alcantara, Bishop of Antiphehus, till 1835, when in August of that year the Rt. Rev. Dr. Daniel O'Connor assumed the government of the Mission. Succeeding Vicars Apostolic were Doctor Patrick Carew, 1838-1842 (when he was transferred to Calcutta); Doctor John Fennelly, 1842-1868; Doctor Stephen Fennelly, 1868-1880; The Most Rev. Doctor Joseph Colgan 1880-1911, in whose time the Vicariate Apostolic was raised to an Archdiocese on the establishment of the Indian Hierarchy in 1886. It was during the administration of John Fennelly that the status of the Catholic community was raised, and the claims of both military and civil Catholic British subjects were adequately recognized by Government. The influence exerted by Dr. Fennelly and by his Clergy upon the European residents, and especially upon the Irish Catholic soldiers, at Madras and other military stations, may be regarded as the most important fruit of his Episcopate.

John Fennelly was brave and outspoken, and of the Daniel O'Connor type. His intrepid advocacy of the cause of his flock obtained for the Catholic community of Madras the recognition of Government. Promotion from the ranks of Catholics in the Indian Army may well be said to have been inaugurated by the strenuous exertions of this good Bishop. He was prominent in the meeting of sympathy with Sir Chas. Trevelyan, the Governor on his recall. In fact, John Fennelly was the founder of the then Madras Mission, which has now risen to be an Archdiocese. He was indefatigable in building the foundations, and spared himself in nothing. He was thoroughly unselfish, broadly tolerant of the religion of others, and ever ready to take up the cause of the poor at whatever cost. Despite all the work that fell to his share in those days of pioneer trouble and anxiety, he daily devoted two hours to teaching in the schools. He was a great and prolific writer and an unsparing controversialist. His memory is enshrined in the hearts of the generation of Madras Catholics who are rapidly passing away, while his bones lie interred in the precincts of the Sanctuary of that Cathedral Church which was the arena of his life's labours. John Fennelly was succeeded by Stephen Fennelly, his brother, under whose régime the finances of the Mission were greatly improved by his tact and business habits. Doctor Joseph Colgan was nominated in private consistory, May 1882, Bishop of Aureliopolis and Vicar Apostolic of Madras, and consecrated on the 24th August of the same year in the Catholic Cathedral. Promoted to the Archiepiscopal dignity by the Decree of 25th November 1886, he was proclaimed at Bangalore on the 25th January 1887, and nominated by Pope Leo XIII. Assistant at the Pontifical Throne, on the occasion of His Grace's Golden Jubilee, 4th February 1894. His Grace Dr. J. Colvan was called to his reward 11th February 1911, and was succeeded by the Most Rev. John Aelen, D.D., Co-adjutor Bishop and a Member of St. Joseph's Society, Mill-Hill (London). Doctor Aelen was nominated Bishop of Ternisonia and Co-adjutor to His Grace the Archbishop of Madras on 2nd December 1901, consecrated at Rozendaal (Holland), 2nd February 1902. Appointed Co-adjutor cum jure successionis to His Grace the Archbishop, 31st July 1903.

The Cathedral Church has two transepts, with a sanctuary, sacristy, nave and side aisles, built by the Italian Capuchins in 1775, and then consisted of a nave with two side aisles, and a sanctuary under a pent roof. The pent roof was removed by Dr. O'Connor in 1837, and a flat roof put on, the walls of the nave having been raised ten feet. The sanctuary was at the same time thrown down and enlarged, and two transepts added. His Grace Archbishop Colgan raised the roof of the side Altars to the height of the roof of the Chancel, which is now fitted up with stained glass windows. The picture of the Crucifixion and Mary Magdalene, more than life size, is said to be one of the finest oil paintings in India.

In the Moorat Chapel, attached to the Cathedral, there is an artistic monument of Italian marble. Mr. Moorat was the wealthiest Armenian of his day. He left charitable benefactions known as the "Moorat Fund." His monument bears the date 16th April 1816. His wife, Anna Raphael, died 28th July 1828, aged 57. The earliest gravestone is dated 11th November 1751, and records the sepulchre of Muthu Nayakar, son of Babu Nayakar of the Kavarai caste. The date, 22nd February 1786, is inscribed over the resting place of "Adrian Fourbeck, a merchant of this city of Madraspatnam, aged 71 years." Adrian Fourbeck built a small bridge over the Adyar, 1763, as is recorded in English, Tamil, Persian and Latin, on a monument half way to the Mount outside the Collector of Chingleput's residence at Lushington's Garden. But this is not the Marnalong Bridge which dates from 1725, and was erected by Petrus Uskan, another Armenian Catholic.

Bishopric of San Thome (Mylapore).

According to South Indian traditions, supported by the collateral testimony of the East and West (see Dr. Medlicott's India and the Apostle St. Thomas: London, David Nutt, 1905), the Apostle St. Thomas, after preaching in various parts of India, settled down in old Mylapore (as distinguished from the Mylapore of the present day); was martyred on the hill at St. Thomas' Mount and was buried on the spot on which the San Thomé Cathedral now stands in A.D. 68. The Christian Church of India, founded by St. Thomas, continued to flourish till the persecutions that followed in the wake of the revival of Brahmanism, when the Christian Bishops and priests were put to death and the remnants of their flocks took refuge in the mountains of Malabar. Shortly after, old Mylapore was overwhelmed by the sea (which has a habit of encroaching and receding at this point annually), and the Mylapore of the present time came into being. The fugitive Christians however kept their faith alive by furtive visits to the Grave of the Apostle in the now deserted old Mylapore, till Nestorian Missionaries and Bishops from Persia, gathered them once again into communities, and built a church and monastery at old Mylapore, and another church and chapel at St. Thomas' Mount, which were visited by Marco Polo and other early travellers. But by the beginning of the XVIth century, these buildings had fallen into ruin, till scarcely a trace of them was left when a Portuguese Royal Commission came in quest of the Grave of St. Thomas, which it discovered and identified in 1523, and built a chapel over it to mark the spot.

Presently the Portuguese town of San Thomé sprang up on the site of old Mylapore and was subsequently fortified and made a Bishopric in 1606, by Pope Paul V., at the request of Philip II., King of Portugal, when, later on, the Dutch took San Thomé and handed it over to the Muhammadans, the Muhammadan Governors and their followers settled in the place that separated the European town of San Thomé from the Brahmin town of (new) Mylapore.

When the Bishopric of San Thomé was created, the King of Portugal undertook to support it for all time: a promise which his successors have kept, notwithstanding all the vicissitudes, through which their fortunes have passed, up to the present; enjoying in return the privilege of presenting to the Pope their nominees for the Bishopric. The Bishops of San Thomé originally exercised jurisdiction over all the countries bordering the Bay of Bengal, including Burma. But this jurisdiction was delimited by the Concordat of 1886, entered into between the Holy See and the Government of Portugal.

The present Cathedral at San Thomé was built and completed in 1896 by Dr. Henry Reed DaSilva, who was the first to assume the title of "Bishop of Mylapore," for ordinary use, in order to avoid confusing San Thomé in Madras with San Thomé a Principe (off the West Coast of Africa), an important actual possession of Portugal. But in official documents the Bishops are still described as of San Thomé de Meliapor.

On the occasion of the Tricentenary of the creation of the Bishopric (1906), Dr. Theotonius de Castro, the present Bishop, had the fosse of the Grave of St. Thomas enlarged and faced with marble, to enable pilgrims to have access to the bottom of the Grave and to enable Masses to be celebrated immediately over the Grave, according to the practice of the early Christians.

THE ARTIFICIAL HARBOUR AT MADRAS.

Nature having done absolutely nothing for the provision at Madras of any kind of shelter for shipping, it has been necessary artificially to provide an enclosed artificial harbour having an area of 200-acres affording water in all weather at a cost of over a million sterling. The following is a sketch of the provision so made.

A 9-acre boat basin serves for the safe harbourage of all the small craft, from 1,000 ton downwards, working in the harbour. It is equipped with 1,600 feet of shallow quay wallings alongside of which barges and cargo boats can lie, and is now extensively used for the landing and shipping of iron and stone as well as for non-dutiable coasting cargo, for the handling of which 17 hydraulic cranes have been provided.

A canal from the boat basin leads into a 2-acre timber pond, equipped with small jetties and cranes and with all facilities for handling the timber trade, for which a large storage area is reserved around the pond. The boat basin shelters the Trust's own fleet of some 17 vessels of 1,000 tons and downwards, and, in addition, accommodates as many 40 to 100-ton lighters as private enterprise sees fit to supply for the needs of the landing and shipping business.

There has also been constructed in the boat basin a slipway capable of taking vessels up to 900 tons deadweight, and an area has been reserved with a ramp leading to it on which the smaller barges and boats may be built and repaired. Close alongside the boat basin and its slipway the Trust has built its new and convenient permanent workshops, which are able to undertake all reasonable repairs to its own extensive plant and occasionally to render assistance to shipping.

The port is adequately provided with piping, through which oil and petrol may be pumped into the merchants' installations from vessels lying at their moorings.

Horses and cattle can walk straight ashore into, or can embark from, paddocks, without the intervention of railway wagons.

The West Quay provides berthing for four, or in an emergency, e.g., during mobilisation, for six, vessels of 26 to 30 feet draft. Back of the four berths are four transit sheds of an area of about 7 acres. Between the ship berths, spaces, equipped with 81-ton hydraulic cranes, have been reserved for working cargo in and out of lighters. Large portal cranes are provided for working cargo direct in and out of the holds of ships lying at the quay. Electric trucks and stackers have been provided for the speedy transport of cargo into the sheds.

There are three other ship-quays, namely, the Outer Quay, used chiefly for the discharge of case oil and petrol on the north-eastern sheltering breakwater; the East Quay, used for coal, at the old, now closed, harbour entrance; and the South Quay, used chiefly by Rangoon and Singapore passenger vessels, as well as by horse and cattle boats. All these three quays, as well as the West Quay berths, are connected up by rail, on both the metre and the standard gauge, with all parts of the harbour and indeed of India. Everywhere troops and passengers can pass from rail to ship's side in half a dozen paces.

Suitable accommodation for passengers of all classes has been provided at the South Quay at a cost of about Rs. 2,00,000.

SCHEDULE OF HARBOUR DUES

Parties having goods to clear through the Custom House may do so either personally or through authorized agents. Instructions regarding procedure in clearance may be obtained on application to the Collector of Customs, at whose office a list of authorized agents will be found posted. Parties are advised that it is their business to declare goods brought to the Custom House and that the Customs officers do not undertake to advise consignees of the existence of goods which are brought there. Goods left uncleared for four months are forfeited to Government and sold by auction.

Under section 85 (b) of the Sea Customs Act, goods, at the Port of Madras, are landed into the custody of the Madras Port Trust, who are responsible for seeing that they are delivered to the rightful owner. Bills of lading or other proofs of ownership in goods should be produced to the Port Trust.

Goods imported must be declared at the real value as defined in the Act. Undervaluation of goods renders the owner liable to penalties as well as to have his goods taken over by Government at the price put upon them.

Under section 196 of the Sea Customs Act, the unshipping, carrying, shipping and landing of all goods, and the bringing of them to the proper place for examination or weighing, and the putting of them into and out of the scales, and the opening, unpacking, bulking, sorting, lotting, marking and numbering of goods, where such operations are necessary or permitted, and the removing of goods to and the placing of them in the proper place of deposit, shall be performed by or at the expense of the owner of such goods.

The rules governing shipment are similar to those governing the landing of goods.

Special arrangements are made for the passing of passengers' baggage in regard to which the following rules are the most important.

(1) The bonâ fide baggage of a passenger is exempt from duty when it accompanies him; does not form part of the cargo; and is not included in the manifest.

(2) Bonâ fide baggage shall include wearing apparel and personal effects, provided that the articles are not for sale and are imported for the personal use of the passenger or for the use of members of his family travelling with him; but it shall not include the following articles on which duty must be paid in all cases.

(a) Arms, ammunition and all other articles enumerated in schedule II of the old Tariff Import Schedule.

(b) Alcoholic liquor exceeding two quarts, perfumed spirit exceeding one quart, and all other articles enumerated in Schedule III.

(c) Cigars and cigarettes exceeding 100 in number, whether in opened or unopened boxes, and other tobacco exceeding 1 lb. in weight.

(d) Pianos, pianolas, carriages, motor cars and motor cycles.

(e) Articles for household use such as furniture, pictures, carpets, glass, crockery, cutlery, and silver and plated ware except such articles (other than furniture or carpets) as shall appear to the Customs authorities to be imported in a moderate quantity and to be required for the personal use of the passenger whilst travelling or immediately upon his arrival at his destination.

(3) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in rule (1), bonâ fide baggage landed at any Customs Port within one month before or after the arrival of a passenger in India, may, subject to the exceptions specified in rule (2), be passed free at the discretion of the Collector of Customs.

SUNDAYS AND CHARTER-PARTY HOLIDAYS IN RELATION TO MERCANTILE CONTRACTS.

The following Ruling was adopted at a General Meeting of the Madras Chamber of Commerce held on the 29th April 1902:—

Goods falling due for delivery on a Sunday, or on a Charter-Party and Shipping Holiday, must be delivered on the day previous to the Sunday or the Charter-Party and Shipping Holiday, as the case may be.

DATE OF SHIPMENT.

The Chamber considered the question of what evidence should be accepted as to date of shipment, and at the General Meeting held on the 27th June, 1911, it was resolved that the following Clause—which had been recommended by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce for adoption by the Bombay Native Piece-goods Merchants Association—should be recommended to members of this Chamber for incorporation in their contracts:—

Either Bill of Lading date, or the date of Manchester Ship Canal Co's Certificate, or (in the case of Goods to be shipped from any Port other than Manchester), the date of Dock, Railway or Shipowners' Certificate of receipt for shipment, shall be conclusive evidence as to the date of shipment.

NON-WEATHER-WORKING LAY DAYS IN MADRAS.

The following Rule defining non-weather working lay days in Madras was adopted at the General Monthly Meeting of the Madras Chamber of Commerce held on the 26th July 1910:—

"During inclement weather, the Committee of the Madras Chamber of Commerce, in consultation with the Port Officer, will decide as to what may or may not be considered a weather-working day.

N.B.—The procedure under this Rule is to be as follows:—

When the parties interested cannot agree as to whether a day is a weather working day or not, the matter shall be represented on the same day to the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and if the Committee and the Port Officer agree that, by reason of inclement weather, the day should be declared a non-weather working day, the Committee shall forthwith declare it to be so, and place it on record for further reference if necessary.

MADRAS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

ARBITRATIONS AND SURVEYS

ON

PIECE-GOODS AND YARNS.

(As revised in September, 1922).

Whereas it has been represented to the Madras Chamber of Commerce (hereinafter called "the Chamber") that it is desirable to give Arbitration Awards and Survey Reports on piece-goods and yarns an official character, the following Rules have been passed by the Chamber for the attainment of that end:—

Rule I—Certain gentlemen, who have been nominated and unanimously elected by an annual ballot held in January by the Committee of the Chamber, shall be appointed Arbitrators and for Surveyors to the Chamber, but the Chamber reserves the right of cancelling the first and all future appointments by a majority of votes of the Committee of the Chamber by ballot.

ARBITRATIONS.

Rule II—In every case where a dispute has arisen in relation to a contract which provides for a decision thereon by the Chamber or in relation to a contract in respect of "Amrutanjan" ask for it and take not substitutes.

which both parties thereto shall have subsequently agreed in writing to submit to such a decision, either party to such a contract may apply to the Secretary of the Chamber for the appointment of Arbitrators to adjudicate the dispute.

On receipt of such application, two Arbitrators shall be appointed in accordance with the following provisions.

Rule III.—The Imports Sub-Committee shall select the Arbitrators from the authorised list, and if the Arbitrators are unable to come to an unanimous decision the Imports Sub-Committee shall select an Umpire, either from the authorised list or otherwise, provided that no Arbitrator or Umpire shall be selected or shall adjudicate on a matter in which he or his employers are interested, and not more than one person from the same firm shall be appointed an Arbitrator or Umpire. If any Arbitrator or Umpire declines or fails to act, or if he dies or becomes incapable of acting, the Imports Sub-Committee may appoint a new Arbitrator or Umpire in his stead in like manner.

Rule IV.—The names of the Arbitrators or the Umpire shall not be made known to any persons whatever except as provided in Rules IX and XXI, but the Secretary's record of the Arbitrations shall be available for inspection by the Imports Sub-Committee and by the Chairman of the Chamber or in his absence from Madras by the Vice-Chairman.

Rule V.—The approved list of Arbitrators under these Rules shall be circulated annually, or when ever asked for, to all members of the Chamber and shall be supplied to any party applying for the same.

ESTATES.

Situated in North Travancore, the British boundary dividing them from the Palm Hills and Madura District on the East, and the Coimbatore District on the North.

Elevation from 1,000 feet rising to Annamudi, 8,837 feet, the highest mountain in Southern India.

Mannar, 4,800 feet elevation, is the Head-quarter of the Kannan Devan Hills Produce Company, at which place there is a Post Office and Telegraph Office, within easy reach of the other estates.

Kodikkal Road is the nearest Railway station, a cart road thence to Bodynakanni, the foot of the ghat, and from there a bridle path for 20 miles to Devacolum; a Ropeway and Tramway have been constructed to Mannar.

In the general description of the District mention might be made to the effect that there is an excellent motor road to these Hills viz. Udamalpet and Chinnar and a partly unmetalled cart road from Alwa, viz., Tattakad and Mankulam.

Much of the land is the property of the Kannan Devan Hills Produce Company, who have opened out the country.

Tea, coffee and cinchona all thrive excellently, as do all sorts of English vegetables, fruits and flowers. The climate (excepting during the rains in the south-west monsoon) is perfect, and during December, January and February, there are sharp frosts most nights on the plateau. The average rainfall is 100 inches, well distributed throughout the year, but the greater quantity falls during the monsoon from June to September.

BOOTS FOR BUSINESS

RUB-BER SOLES.

It matters so much to the business man that his boots should be smart, yet a comfortable fit, for he generally has to wear them all day long without any chance of a change, and they must, above all, be pleasant and easy to walk in. Yet he will not put up with anything "sloppy"—he must have a trim, stylish boot, as good as it looks and of the right quality to stand the "rush and bustle" of everyday business life. We make just the proper footwear to meet these requirements.

ONE LAC. NEW RIDERS EVERY YEAR.

RALEIGH

THE ALL-STEEL BICYCLE

100,000

"You can fool some of the people all the time,
You can fool all the people some of the time
But you can't fool all the people all the time"

—Abraham Lincoln

Which means that the consumer is in the end always the best judge of value for money in any article. It matters not whether that article be a biscuit, a boat, or a bicycle; what the public buys and keeps on buying is invariably the best of its kind.

Thirty-six years ago the first Raleigh bicycle was made. During the last twenty-four years the Raleigh has grown in favour until to-day the number of new Raleigh riders every year has reached the enormous number of 100,000. It is further estimated that 90 per cent. of those who select a Raleigh do so on the recommendation of other Raleigh riders. This is a point well worth remembering.

ARCOT (SOUTH).

A District in the Madras Presidency. Bounded on the North by Chingleput and North Arcot, on the South by Trichinopoly and Tanjore, on the East by the Bay of Bengal; and on the West by Salem. Area, 4,207 square miles. Population, 2,320,085. Language spoken—Tamil.

Cuddalore.—A sea-port, and the headquarters of the district, is situated on the Pennai and Gadilam rivers, vessels anchor within about 1½ miles of the shore. In 1682, the E. I. C. opened up negotiations with the Khan of Gingee for a factory at Cuddalore, and the first buildings were put up in 1683; a ring of palmyra trees still marks the land ceded for the settlement. Trade grew rapidly, and the Company erected Fort St. David and enlarged their warehouses. In 1702 the fortifications were rebuilt on more modern lines. On the fall of Madras in 1746, the administration was taken to Cuddalore. Fort St. David was soon after twice besieged by Duplex, but without success; in 1752, the headquarters of Government were re-established in Madras, and, six years after, the French occupied the town and stormed and destroyed the Fort. It was re-taken by the British in 1760, but again fell into the hands of the French in 1772, and was unsuccessfully besieged by the British in the following year. In 1785 it was finally restored to England, under the treaty of Versailles.

A few of the ruins of the old Fort still exist, and the old garden-house (1788) of the Governors of Fort St. David is now the official residence of the Collector of the district.

There is a Station Club, and also one for Indian gentlemen. Conveyances can be hired at the Railway Station (South Indian Railway), and in the town.
